Air Force Discoverer Puts Satellite In Orbit

Shot Next Month To Carry Live Monkey Aloft

By RALPH DIGHTON

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) —Discoverer XX—the biggest, heaviest, most powerful yet — shot into orbit Friday with a new stunt on its mechanical mind: Keeping its recoverable capsule aloft for a record four days.

Next month a similar capsule is expected to carry a monkey aloft to sample hazards man will encounter during an extended period in orbit.

The 81-foot projectile roared into a clear, blue sky at 12:26 p.m. Two hours later the Air Force said its satellite second stage was whizzing around the earth's poles every 95 minutes at altitudes ranging from 201 to 400 miles.

Some time Tuesday, if all goes well, the satellite will kick out a 300-pound bell-shaped capsule over Alaska. Cargo planes will try to snag its parachute as it drifts down over the target area north of Hawaii.

The ejection could be shoved up a day or two if bad weather is forecast for Tuesday, or if some malfunction shows up in the satellite.

The longest a Discoverer has kept its capsule in orbit heretofore was three days, in Discoverer XVIII launched Dec. 7. This was the third capsule to be caught in the air. A fourth was recovered from the ocean.

Discoverer XX is six feet longer and 750 pounds heavier than the 19-foot, 1,700-pound satellites lofted earlier in the series. It was boosted by an improved Thor medium-range missile burning a more powerful fuel.

The capsule itself contains devices to measure the effect of radiation on instruments planned for Samos eye-in-the-sky camera satellites and Midas missiles detection satellite.

Also aboard is a radar beacon of the type to be used in future transit navigation satellites.

Burnice Geiger Given 15 Years

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP)—Burnice Iverson Geiger, 58, a banker's daughter who admitted a $2-million embezzlement from her father's bank, was sentenced to 15 years in prison Friday.

At the same time the government disclosed that her speculations and financial help for a struggling home town industry were principal outlets for the funds embezzled from the Sheldon National Bank.

A government attorney said her speculations during a period of almost three decades amounted to nearly a million dollars. She lost $1,000 a month on the "board of trade" during that period. In addition, he said, the Northern Biochemical Corp. of Sheldon drained the bank of about $900,000.

Mrs. Geiger, a faint smile on her lips as she entered the courtroom, sobbed softly and dabbed frequently at her eyes with a handkerchief as U.S. Dist. Judge Henry N. Graven pronounced sentence. She was ashen-faced when taken back to the county jail before transfer to a federal prison.

She previously had pleaded guilty to 35 counts of a U.S. attorney's information. Judge Graven assessed no fine.

Her attorney, Warren Dunkle, pleaded with the court to return her to society under severe parole.

"Imprisonment would punish only her family," he said. "Mrs. Geiger is resigned to her fate and a prison sentence would actually be a relief to her."

Since her arrest last Jan. 16, the day the bank shortages were discovered by federal examiners during a routine examination, Mrs. Geiger has preferred a jail cell to going home.

Her husband, Wallace, a Sheldon merchant, was the only member of her family in court. Her father, W. P. Iverson, 83, president of the now closed bank, and her mother remained away.

US To Probe Arms Reports By Burmese

WASHINGTON (AP)— Expressing serious concern, the U. S. government Friday ordered an inquiry into reports that modern U. S. arms have been funneled to Chinese Nationalist soldiers in the northern hills of Burma.

It offered again to help evacuate the Chinese. And it promised prompt and appropriate action if the arms are found to have come from the U. S. arms aid program.

The Chinese are remnants of Chiang Kai-shek's army driven out of mainland China into Burma in 1949. They have been a repeated source of friction with the Burmese since Chiang has publicly disavowed those who are remaining.

After Burma appealed to the United Nations in 1953, the United States helped evacuate about 7,000 of the troops. U. S. officials said they did not know how many are still left.

The U. S. ambassador in Rangoon, William P. Snow, was ordered to arrange for an investigation of the captured materiel to determine its source.

Minimum Pay Bill Hits Snag

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy's proposal to increase the minimum wage and extend its coverage met opposition from both sides in Congress Friday, foreshadowing rough seas ahead.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Labor Committee, voiced open disappointment with the bill and promised to fight to broaden its provisions.

Republicans on the Labor Committee renewed the attack they made on a similar measure in the last Congress, charging it would cause inflation and increase unemployment.

William F. Schnitzler, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO, also joined in the criticism, labeling the administration bill "somewhat disappointing."

Kennedy has recommended boosting the $1-an-hour minimum wage to $1.15 at once, $1.20 next year and $1.25 the following year.

He also has asked that 4.3 million additional workers, most of them in retail and service trades, be brought under the law's coverage.

Lost Polka Dot Satellite Is Found Orbiting Earth

It's been out there in space all the time, orbiting the earth and doing its duty.

The satellite had been on the missing list since 9:20 a.m. EST Friday. When it was found, delighted officials christened it Explorer IX, thus making it a member of an honored family of satellites famous for space research.

Explorer IX, a 15-pound 12-foot balloon covered with polka dots, was launched at 8:05 a. m. EST Thursday from Wallops Island, Va., with a four-stage solid fuel Scout rocket.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) tracked it half way around the world to Woomera, Australia, where signals from its radio beacon were picked up at 9:20 a.m. EST.

Then the satellite went silent, and a NASA spokesman announced: "It's lost."

It turned out that the satellite's radio beacon merely had failed.

In announcing that the lost was found, NASA said confirmation that the sphere had gone into orbit was based on visual and photographic sightings.

Project officials said the sphere appeared to be in an orbit similar to that of the 127-pound burned-out fourth stage of the launching rocket.

3 UN Nations Offer Congo Peace Plan

Asian-African Trio Making Effort To Prevent Civil War

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —Three Asian-African nations put before the U.N. Security Council Friday their plan for peace in the Congo — including use of force as a last resort if necessary by U.N. forces to stop civil war.

U.S. Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson told reporters the United States was doubtful about some of the provisions in the resolution but that "It offers a basis for negotiations."

Valerian A. Zorin, the Soviet delegate, declined to say whether he would veto the resolution — an action that might bring an emergency session of the General Assembly on the Congo before the regular session resumes in less than three weeks.

Ceylon, Liberia and the United Arab Republic submitted the resolution, described by one African delegate as having the support of all Asian-Africans "from leftist Guinea to pro-Western Tunisia."

In addition to authorizing use of force if needed to halt civil war, the resolution urges:

1. Taking of measures for immediate withdrawal and evacuation from the Congo of all Belgian and foreign mercenaries.

2. Halting by all states of departure of such personnel to the Congo.

3. Immediate and impartial investigation into the death of former Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba.

It urges also the immediate convening of the Congo Parliament and the reorganization of all Congo armed units.

Nowhere in the resolution does the name of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold or Congo President Joseph Kasavubu appear.

Any mention of Hammarskjold or Kasavubu was regarded as certain to cause a Soviet veto in view of Moscow's demand that Hammarskjold be fired, and its declaration that leftist Premier Antoine Gizenga is the legitimate head of the Congo government.

The United Arab Republic is among nations which have already extended recognition to the Gizenga regime in Stanleyville, and as a sponsor could not accept such language in the resolution.

Lumumba's Widow Seeks UN Sanctuary

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — The widow of Patrice Lumumba fled to the United Nations for protection Friday as the Congo regime in Leopoldville started a crackdown on supporters of the late husband.

U.N. authorities agreed to fly the 24-year-old widow to Stanleyville, the Lumumbist capital, Saturday along with about 30 of her friends and relatives, including Mrs. Maurice Mpolo, wife of the former minister who was slain alongside Lumumba.

Lumumba's Lieutenants In Struggle For Power

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Patrice Lumumba's lieutenants are locked in a desperate struggle for power among themselves and anarchy reigns in the one-third of the Congo they control, intelligence reports said Friday.

Anicet Kashamura, a close adviser of the dead ex-premier, has been dethroned as head of Kivu Province and taken by army escort to Stanleyville, the rebel capital, diplomatic advices said. He was considered No. 2 behind Communist-backed rebel Premier Antoine Gizenga. But Gizenga himself is reported to be in peril.

Refugees reaching neighboring Ruanda-Urundi from Kivu said Kashamura was beaten before his arrest. They told of terror rising in Bukavu, Kivu capital, with one priest beheaded and other whites molested by unruly rebel soldiers and young nationalists.

There was speculation, however, that Kashamura, who considers himself a Socialist, was too soft to play the hard, Communist-style role expected of him in Kivu.

Gizenga, whose army put Kashamura in power in Kivu earlier this month, was believed to be in a shaky position because of his lack of a personal political following in Oriental Province.

In the Congo, the allegiance of tribes is strong, and Gizenga, a native of Leopoldville Province, is regarded as a foreigner in Stanleyville.

One claimant mentioned in intelligence reports for Lumumba's chair of authority is Bernard Salumu, anti-Western commissioner of Stanleyville. Some ministers in President Jean Foster Manzikala's Oriental provincial government also have been mentioned.

One Western diplomat said the whole picture of rebel chaos and confusion would be changed overnight if the leftists succeed in gaining the support of Sudan. This would open a road for arms and supply shipments to the rebels from their friends in the United Arab Republic.

JFK Urged To Halt Railroad Mergers

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Railroad labor unions Friday urged President Kennedy to take immediate steps to block all railroad mergers pending an assessment of their effect on the national economy.

The resolution was adopted by the Railway Labor Executives Association, representing 23 railroad employe unions.

They said more than 400,000 railroad jobs have vanished in the past five years and a further estimated 200,000 cut in employment can be anticipated if currently proposed mergers of railroad properties go through.

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — About 50 Communists brawled with police in front of the U.S. consulate and USIS library at Mandalay Friday after demonstrating against American supply of arms to Nationalist China, the newspaper Nation reported.

The Nation said they pelted the consulate with tomatoes and stones before police riot squads moved in to disperse the group. Ten demonstrators were arrested.

In Rangoon, a security cordon was thrown round the U.S. Embassy, but no demonstrators showed up.

Kennedy Has Support Of Many States

Executives Voice Approval Of Ideas To Help Jobless

By The Associated Press

Governors of many states voiced strong approval Friday of President Kennedy's call for stepped-up spending of federal aid funds to put jobless men back to work.

Some states already were pressing action to get the program going in their areas, or were studying plans to do so.

All down the line the response in the states was favorable. Several governors said they began steps even prior to the President's announcement of accelerated government spending.

"We started speeding up before Kennedy asked us," said Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington.

"I put out a directive to the highway department three weeks ago ordering such a program. We have already finished the scheduling of early contract-letting on highway projects."

Kennedy on Wednesday urged the nation's governors to act promptly to use more than a billion dollars in federal aid funds to bolster the economy.

Included was $734 million in funds for federal highway construction and $350 million he released for construction of schools and other facilities in state areas crowded by influxes of federal workers.

"I heartily endorse your program to invigorate the national economy," Virginia Gov. J. Lindsay Almond Jr. wired the President. "As far as plans and means are available, and subject to my direction, I assure you of my cooperation."

The Virginia State Highway Commission said that under the stepped-up program it could hasten the spending of about $7 million in federal road aid.

Ohio Gov. Michael V. DiSalle said the state has $100 million worth of construction that could be let for immediate contracts.

In Wisconsin, Gov. Gaylord A. Nelson early this month directed the State Highway Commission to review its program with an eye to the prospect that federal funds would be available ahead of schedule.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown said his state is stepping up highway projects from $28 million monthly to $35-40 million monthly, and quickening spending of $30 million in state school-building funds, with priority given projects in hard-hit areas.

In North Carolina, Gov. Terry Sanford said the state already was ahead on its interstate highway program — and has spent about all funds available.

Washington Gov. Albert D. Rosellini said $5.25 million will be used to speed purchase of rights-of-way for the Seattle-Tacoma Freeway, and that he was asking the legislature for a $2-million appropriation to distribute some $25 million worth of federal surplus foods.

Expert Says No Split Seen Between Red China-Russia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A university expert on Communist ideology warned senators Friday not to count on any major split between the Soviet Union and Red China "in the foreseeable future.

Prof. Zbigniew Brzezinski of Columbia University told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that "the thing that will drive them together and keep them together is their overriding hostility toward the rest of the world."

Brzezinski said the two regimes might differ on various policies but "we should not count so heavily on a Sino-Soviet split. . . I don't think it is likely to occur in the foreseeable future."

The witness, now an associate professor at Columbia's Russian Institute, testified at a committee hearing on "Ideology and Foreign Affairs," based on a report prepared as part of its long-range study of foreign policy. Brzezinski worked on the report when he was at the Harvard University Center for International Affairs.

Expert Says No Split Seen Between Red China-Russia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A university expert on Communist ideology warned senators Friday not to count on any major split between the Soviet Union and Red China "in the foreseeable future.

Prof. Zbigniew Brzezinski of Columbia University told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that "the thing that will drive them together and keep them together is their overriding hostility toward the rest of the world."

Brzezinski said the two regimes might differ on various policies but "we should not count so heavily on a Sino-Soviet split. . . I don't think it is likely to occur in the foreseeable future."

The witness, now an associate professor at Columbia's Russian Institute, testified at a committee hearing on "Ideology and Foreign Affairs," based on a report prepared as part of its long-range study of foreign policy. Brzezinski worked on the report when he was at the Harvard University Center for International Affairs.

Maryland Senate Receives Report On Alcoholics

Allegany County Shows Increase In Chronic Cases

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Alcoholics and drug addicts came in for attention by the Maryland Senate Friday.

The Finance Committee received a report estimating there are 76,700 alcoholics in the state—ranking it among the top three in the South Atlantic region.

And Sen. J. Alvin Jones, D-Balto 4th, introduced a bill to provide for the treatment of narcotic addicts at State expense.

The alcoholism report, prepared by the Maryland Commission on Alcoholism, said the affliction ranks only behind heart disease, cancer and mental illness as a national health threat.

As might be expected, the commission, headed by Lewis P. Gunry, found that Baltimore contains about 40 per cent of the state's total alcoholic population. These, along with alcoholics in Anne Arundel, Prince Georges, Montgomery, Washington and Baltimore counties, represent a majority of all Maryland alcoholics.

But the commission reported "a marked and as yet unexplained increase" in alcholism in Kent, Queen Annes, Charles and Allegany counties.

The commission, seeking Finance Committee approval of a $25,000 appropriation to continue its work next fiscal year, said about 75 per cent of Maryland alcoholics are in early enough stages of the disease to be "most responsive to treatment."

Jones' narcotics bill, would require physicians to report suspected cases of addiction to local health officials. Any persons believing he is an addict could voluntarily report to these officials.

New Housing Construction Shows Pick-Up

12 Per Cent Gain Seen Last Month

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New housing construction picked up moderately in January after hitting bottom in December, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

But it said that during the same period there was a reduction in the backlog of unfilled orders for such durable goods as automobiles and machinery.

The 12 per cent increase in housing starts was a bright side of the economic picture. A decline in non-durable goods orders, however, usually means future production cutbacks.

The department said new orders for durable goods fell by $200 million to a $13.1 billion total in January.

The Commerce Department said new housing was started at an annual rate of $1,098,000 in January, compared to a December figure of 984,000. The statistics include both farm and non-farm construction.

Officials said the increase probably was due in part to the fact that many housing starts planned in December were postponed because of heavy snowfalls in many parts of the country.

Only the Northeast, hit hardest by the bad weather, showed a significant decline in building starts during January. There was a 30 per cent increase in the north central states and a 26 per cent rise in the South, but a 1 per cent slippage in the West.

The Salisbury educator was active in community life, and held many civic posts. In 1950 he was honored by Western Maryland College for "outstanding achievements and service to education."

Racial Listing Removed From Birth Records

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland Board of Health Friday approved removal of racial designation from birth certificates, despite opposition to the move by the only Negro member of the board.

The order is effective Jan. 1, 1962. Removal of racial designation had been urged on grounds that the information might be used for discrimination.

Dr. Ralph Young, a Baltimore Negro physician opposing the change, contended omission of racial data would make it hard for him to get statistical information on health problems peculiar to Negroes. Young yielded his position when a department official assured him racial and other information would be kept in the confidential files of the board.

Young discounted the theory that the change in birth certificates would help reduce discrimination. "I've never had a birth certificate stand in my way, while a lot of other papers have," he said.

Young said he would prefer to see mention of race removed from city and state employment applications.

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—The House tentatively approved Friday a resolution under which Maryland would ratify an equal-rights-for-women amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

A group of feminine witnesses argued for the amendment before the House Judiciary Committee last week. The committee approved the proposal after tacking on minor amendments.

The 120-by-40-foot frame barn was valued at $8,000. Also destroyed were 30 tons of hay, six tons of straw, several tons of feed, a pickup truck and a lime spreader.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—The massive University of Maryland armory, built in 1943 at a cost of $450,000, was named Friday in honor of Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of the state.

Young Gunman Robs State Liquor Store

Uses Toy Pistol To Take $60 Cash

ELIZABETH, W. Va. (UPI) — A young gunman held up the state liquor store here Friday and a short time later State Police announced the arrest of three juveniles in connection with the case.

A 17-year-old boy believed to have been the youth who made off with about $60 from the store turned himself in to local police and the other two were called out of classes at Wirt High School.

All three youths, the others, 14 and 15, were reportedly on parole, two from grand larceny charges in Wood County and the 17-year-old for breaking into the same store.

All three are to be arraigned on armed robbery charges. Authorities declined to reveal the names of the youths because of their ages.

State Police said the weapon used in Friday's holdup turned out to be a toy cap pistol.

About $59 in cash was recovered with the arrests. The holdup occurred during the noon hour and some other money was missed by the hold-up artist in his haste to escape, the store manager said.

Jones' narcotics bill, would require physicians to report suspected cases of addiction to local health officials. Any persons believing he is an addict could voluntarily report to these officials.

Racial Listing Removed From Birth Records

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland Board of Health Friday approved removal of racial designation from birth certificates, despite opposition to the move by the only Negro member of the board.

The order is effective Jan. 1, 1962. Removal of racial designation had been urged on grounds that the information might be used for discrimination.

Dr. Ralph Young, a Baltimore Negro physician opposing the change, contended omission of racial data would make it hard for him to get statistical information on health problems peculiar to Negroes. Young yielded his position when a department official assured him racial and other information would be kept in the confidential files of the board.

Young discounted the theory that the change in birth certificates would help reduce discrimination. "I've never had a birth certificate stand in my way, while a lot of other papers have," he said.

Young said he would prefer to see mention of race removed from city and state employment applications.

All three are to be arraigned on armed robbery charges. Authorities declined to reveal the names of the youths because of their ages.

No. 2 Observer

Mr. Weber at that time was the No. 2 observer in Maryland from the point of service exceeded only by D. Paul Oswald of Hagerstown, who started one year before him in 1902.

The accomodating Garrett countian held the honor of reading the lowest surface temperature ever recorded south of the Mason-Dixon Line — a bitter 40 degrees below zero on January 13, 1912.

For many years Mr. Weber was interested in summer sports including swimming and tennis. He is a past president of the Oakland Rotary Club and was active in that service club.

He and his wife traveled extensively in the United States.

Mr. Weber was a son of the late Henry and Catherine (Schuetz) Weber and the couple is survived by six children, Logan, Bond, Jack and David Weber, Mrs. Betsy Suko, Mt. Lake Park, and Miss Cara Weber at home.

Mr. Weber is also survived by a brother, John Weber of Oakland and two sisters, Miss Diana Weber and Miss Edith Weber, also of Oakland.

Their bodies were taken to the Leighton Funeral Home.

General Gerhardt, division commander, heard of Howie's fighting words, and he issued an order that the major's body be placed in an ambulance. Major Howie entered St. Lo at the head of a column of troops.

Commands Battalion

From the St. Lo sector, about a month after D-Day, Col. Millholland was recalled from his air-ground duties to rejoin the division. He was given the assignment of commanding Major Howie's Third Battalion, and under his leadership, the battalion continued to make military history. He led them through the Normandy campaign, through the Brittany campaign and into Germany.

During this period, the division moved toward Vire. It withstood vicious artillery fire, during which a direct hit on a regimental headquarters caused 12 casualties among the 13 occupants.

The division pressed on to the Vire River in Brittany. As other divisions turned eastward to liberate Paris, the 29th veered toward the west and the fight for Brest. German forces at Brest were under orders to hold for three months at all costs. The 29th launched its attack on Brest on August 25. The battle for Hill 103, a high point east of the city, was a "high-point" of this campaign.

Under the grinding determination of the 29th the Germans could not hold on for three months. In about three weeks, the highly fortified area and the city were in American hands.

General Gerhardt declined an offer to have the 29th serve as occupation forces in Brest. Corps decided to use the division for additional gains. The Blue and Gray hurried across France, Belgium and Holland to reinforce General Courtney H. Hodges' First Army in its attack upon the Siegfried Line and the gateway to Germany.

Wounded In Combat

During this action, Col. Millholland was wounded by artillery fire on November 18, 1944. After two and a half months in hospitals in Germany, Belgium and England, he was sent back to duty with the division. In February 1945, he was the third executive officer assigned to the regiment from the time the attack on the Siegfried line had started. His battalion was in command of a Col. Fisher, who was killed when his Jeep ran over a mine. Col. Millholland got his battalion back.

The crossing of the Roer began on February 23, 1945, about two days after Millholland resumed command of his battalion. The division pressed forward and closed rapidly on Munchen-Gladbach, a great industrial center. The area was soon in U. S. hands as the pick of the German Army could not withstand the fierce assault.

The division crossed the Rhine north of Rheinberg on April 1, and moved into Dinslaken for assembly and refitting.

By April 20, the 29th was back in the fighting business and started a brisk drive, with many actions, eastward. Reaching the Elbe the Blue and Gray established a strip of 39 miles of river line. Division headquarters heard the Russians were approaching the Elbe from the east.

During the night of May 1-2, the division captured 10,367 German prisoners, mostly from the huge V-2 Rocket Division in that area.

When Lt. Kenneth A. Royans took a five-man patrol across the Elbe to greet the long-awaited Russians, he had no difficulty getting volunteers. By late afternoon, they were celebrating their link-up with the vanguard of the Soviet Sixth Guards Cavalry Division, only to learn to the division's dismay that an element from the 69th Infantry Division had linked up with the Russians at another point only a short time earlier.

Named Military Governor

The 29th was then hurried back to the ports of Bremen and Bremerhaven and assigned to the Bremen Enclave. Here an area of about 1,500 square miles had been held by British and Canadians. The division mopped up, and Millholland was named military governor of the area.

In this position, he named mayors for four large cities, and generally governed the area for several months. In this responsibility he had to cope with civil as well as military problems.

As the war in Europe ended, Millholland's battalion was the linking unit between American and British forces, and was the northernmost exposed unit. There was constant fighting and harassment and patrol action, in addition to the work of occupation during this period.

The division, when the Germans surrendered was not scheduled for redeployment to the Pacific and late in November, the 29th sailed for home, landing in Boston three years to the week of their debarkation into history, glory and memories.

SS. Peter & Paul Parents Ask For Bus Service

A group of parents of children attending SS. Peter and Paul Parochial School and the church pastor met with the Allegany County Board of Commissioners to ask that school bus service be supplied to children attending that school.

After a discussion of the situation, the group was informed they would have to consult the Board of Education to obtain what such a program would cost before any action could be taken by the commissioners.

Commissioner John J. Rowan said that the cost of the program is not known and that as an elected commissioner he was watching every expenditure before acting.

He also said the matter of providing school bus service to parochial schools was within the jurisdiction of the Board of Education.

Commissioner William A. Wilson told the group "you are going to be shunted back here to us" by the Board of Education. He also said he was not going to "duck" the issue.

"If you are granted school bus service, then every private school should be treated likewise," Wilson stated.

Wilson cited certain kindergartens operated by other religious denominations and by private individuals as being eligible in the event the parochial schools get bus service.

Frederick Bill Sought By Mathias

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., claims the United States owes Frederick, Md., $200,000, and he introduced a bill Friday to collect it.

Early, a Confederate, marched into town July 9, 1864, on his famous sweep up the Shenandoah Valley and told Frederick's city officials he would spare the town if they paid $200,000. He got it.

The town for years has been trying to be reimbursed but with no luck. There is some hope now, however, because a precedent may have been set. Chambersburg, Pa., and Lawrence, Kan., have been reimbursed for indignities suffered during the Civil War.

No. 2 Observer

Mr. Weber at that time was the No. 2 observer in Maryland from the point of service exceeded only by D. Paul Oswald of Hagerstown, who started one year before him in 1902.

The accomodating Garrett countian held the honor of reading the lowest surface temperature ever recorded south of the Mason-Dixon Line — a bitter 40 degrees below zero on January 13, 1912.

For many years Mr. Weber was interested in summer sports including swimming and tennis. He is a past president of the Oakland Rotary Club and was active in that service club.

He and his wife traveled extensively in the United States.

Mr. Weber was a son of the late Henry and Catherine (Schuetz) Weber and the couple is survived by six children, Logan, Bond, Jack and David Weber, Mrs. Betsy Suko, Mt. Lake Park, and Miss Cara Weber at home.

Mr. Weber is also survived by a brother, John Weber of Oakland and two sisters, Miss Diana Weber and Miss Edith Weber, also of Oakland.

Their bodies were taken to the Leighton Funeral Home.

General Gerhardt, division commander, heard of Howie's fighting words, and he issued an order that the major's body be placed in an ambulance. Major Howie entered St. Lo at the head of a column of troops.

Commands Battalion

From the St. Lo sector, about a month after D-Day, Col. Millholland was recalled from his air-ground duties to rejoin the division. He was given the assignment of commanding Major Howie's Third Battalion, and under his leadership, the battalion continued to make military history. He led them through the Normandy campaign, through the Brittany campaign and into Germany.

During this period, the division moved toward Vire. It withstood vicious artillery fire, during which a direct hit on a regimental headquarters caused 12 casualties among the 13 occupants.

The division pressed on to the Vire River in Brittany. As other divisions turned eastward to liberate Paris, the 29th veered toward the west and the fight for Brest. German forces at Brest were under orders to hold for three months at all costs. The 29th launched its attack on Brest on August 25. The battle for Hill 103, a high point east of the city, was a "high-point" of this campaign.

Under the grinding determination of the 29th the Germans could not hold on for three months. In about three weeks, the highly fortified area and the city were in American hands.

General Gerhardt declined an offer to have the 29th serve as occupation forces in Brest. Corps decided to use the division for additional gains. The Blue and Gray hurried across France, Belgium and Holland to reinforce General Courtney H. Hodges' First Army in its attack upon the Siegfried Line and the gateway to Germany.

Wounded In Combat

During this action, Col. Millholland was wounded by artillery fire on November 18, 1944. After two and a half months in hospitals in Germany, Belgium and England, he was sent back to duty with the division. In February 1945, he was the third executive officer assigned to the regiment from the time the attack on the Siegfried line had started. His battalion was in command of a Col. Fisher, who was killed when his Jeep ran over a mine. Col. Millholland got his battalion back.

The crossing of the Roer began on February 23, 1945, about two days after Millholland resumed command of his battalion. The division pressed forward and closed rapidly on Munchen-Gladbach, a great industrial center. The area was soon in U. S. hands as the pick of the German Army could not withstand the fierce assault.

The division crossed the Rhine north of Rheinberg on April 1, and moved into Dinslaken for assembly and refitting.

By April 20, the 29th was back in the fighting business and started a brisk drive, with many actions, eastward. Reaching the Elbe the Blue and Gray established a strip of 39 miles of river line. Division headquarters heard the Russians were approaching the Elbe from the east.

During the night of May 1-2, the division captured 10,367 German prisoners, mostly from the huge V-2 Rocket Division in that area.

When Lt. Kenneth A. Royans took a five-man patrol across the Elbe to greet the long-awaited Russians, he had no difficulty getting volunteers. By late afternoon, they were celebrating their link-up with the vanguard of the Soviet Sixth Guards Cavalry Division, only to learn to the division's dismay that an element from the 69th Infantry Division had linked up with the Russians at another point only a short time earlier.

Named Military Governor

The 29th was then hurried back to the ports of Bremen and Bremerhaven and assigned to the Bremen Enclave. Here an area of about 1,500 square miles had been held by British and Canadians. The division mopped up, and Millholland was named military governor of the area.

In this position, he named mayors for four large cities, and generally governed the area for several months. In this responsibility he had to cope with civil as well as military problems.

As the war in Europe ended, Millholland's battalion was the linking unit between American and British forces, and was the northernmost exposed unit. There was constant fighting and harassment and patrol action, in addition to the work of occupation during this period.

The division, when the Germans surrendered was not scheduled for redeployment to the Pacific and late in November, the 29th sailed for home, landing in Boston three years to the week of their debarkation into history, glory and memories.

SS. Peter & Paul Parents Ask For Bus Service

A group of parents of children attending SS. Peter and Paul Parochial School and the church pastor met with the Allegany County Board of Commissioners to ask that school bus service be supplied to children attending that school.

After a discussion of the situation, the group was informed they would have to consult the Board of Education to obtain what such a program would cost before any action could be taken by the commissioners.

Commissioner John J. Rowan said that the cost of the program is not known and that as an elected commissioner he was watching every expenditure before acting.

He also said the matter of providing school bus service to parochial schools was within the jurisdiction of the Board of Education.

Commissioner William A. Wilson told the group "you are going to be shunted back here to us" by the Board of Education. He also said he was not going to "duck" the issue.

"If you are granted school bus service, then every private school should be treated likewise," Wilson stated.

Wilson cited certain kindergartens operated by other religious denominations and by private individuals as being eligible in the event the parochial schools get bus service.

Frederick Bill Sought By Mathias

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., claims the United States owes Frederick, Md., $200,000, and he introduced a bill Friday to collect it.

Early, a Confederate, marched into town July 9, 1864, on his famous sweep up the Shenandoah Valley and told Frederick's city officials he would spare the town if they paid $200,000. He got it.

The town for years has been trying to be reimbursed but with no luck. There is some hope now, however, because a precedent may have been set. Chambersburg, Pa., and Lawrence, Kan., have been reimbursed for indignities suffered during the Civil War.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Contrasting Overtones Will Enhance Spring Suit

Powers Girls modelling clothes from the trend-setting collections always face spring with the irresistible urge to buy a whole new wardrobe. But, like most smart career girls, they usually wind up refurbishing their "leftovers." They enjoy giving last year's clothes a fresh outlook, and they have learned to be ingenious. For it is part of their job to "look like a million dollars" and do it on an average budget.

Everyone will be wearing frills. Add lingerie collars of pink pique with dainty edging, white tucked batiste of fine linen with lace as softeners for sleekly tailored suits, costumes and dresses . . . all to button on and off. Let lace touches peep from shorter sleeves of daytime wool dresses.

To give the long torso and sleek hipline look to an old full-from-the-waist skirt of a late-day dress, tunnel velvet ribbon through slots to control the fullness in unpressed pleats.

Let your shirttails fly. Wear blouses and sweater as overblouses instead of tucking them in the skirt.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Contrasting Overtones Will Enhance Spring Suit

Powers Girls modelling clothes from the trend-setting collections always face spring with the irresistible urge to buy a whole new wardrobe. But, like most smart career girls, they usually wind up refurbishing their "leftovers." They enjoy giving last year's clothes a fresh outlook, and they have learned to be ingenious. For it is part of their job to "look like a million dollars" and do it on an average budget.

Everyone will be wearing frills. Add lingerie collars of pink pique with dainty edging, white tucked batiste of fine linen with lace as softeners for sleekly tailored suits, costumes and dresses . . . all to button on and off. Let lace touches peep from shorter sleeves of daytime wool dresses.

To give the long torso and sleek hipline look to an old full-from-the-waist skirt of a late-day dress, tunnel velvet ribbon through slots to control the fullness in unpressed pleats.

Let your shirttails fly. Wear blouses and sweater as overblouses instead of tucking them in the skirt.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — There's no worry visible in Dean Martin's crystal ball. He knows where his caviar and champagne are coming from with 11 pictures on his immediate slate. I might say there are 12 since he's negotiating for "Beau Geste" which he'll make as a musical for his own company, Jade Productions, after he finishes "Gunga Din" (his [illegible]th) with Frank Sinatra and Peter Lawford, for MGM.

On his schedule there's "Brent's Fort", a Western for Hal Wallis, and incidentally, the last under his contract with Wallis—"Toys in the Attic" for the Mirisch Bros., and he's also talking a three-picture deal with Spyros Skouras for 20th Century-Fox. Aside from that, Dean hasn't a thing to do.

Whether the off-again on-again romance of Kim Novak and director Richard Quine will blaze anew when he directs her in "Notorious Landlady" is anyone's guess.

Kim arrived back in Hollywood very quietly without a word to anyone and promptly put her signature on a contract to play opposite Jack Lemmon. Well, wouldn't any actress want to play opposite the popular Jack whose name is money in the box office? And besides, he always turns in a good comedy performance. Of course this movie is for Columbia.

Wanted! Noel Coward for the starring role in "No Bail for the Judge". Gant Gaither, who took over the producing job of this comedy-suspense tale from Alfred Hitchcock, cabled Noel at his home in Jamaica to see if he will make the picture.

Noel is expected in New York for rehearsals of his new play, and since Gaither says he doesn't expect to get "No Bail for the Judge" ready before summer, he's hopeful of getting Noel. Hagar Wilde is working on the script of the Henry Cecil book which was a big hit in London.

Had dinner at Au Petit Jean with Jane Wyman, Freddie Karger and Jimmy McHugh. Freddie entertained us with an account of what happened on his birthday Tuesday night at the Star on the Roof, where his orchestra is playing.

He said that Jack Lemmon and Richard Quine who were having dinner with Felicia Farr and Maggi Brown, discovered it was Freddie's birthday and they took over the orchestra, to the delight of the customers—"and," said Freddie, "I never got on all evening."

Jane was wearing a very stunning black and white knit suit and she said it was Freddie's Christmas gift to her. I think these two have a better understanding than when they were married and one of these days I won't be surprised if they remarry.

Ross Hunter, Sandra Dee, Universal-International and many others, aren't going to like Debbie Reynolds recording a tune called "Tammy, This Is True." She wrote the song when she thought she was going to be the star of "Tammy, Tell Me True," but because of her conflicting commitments she couldn't do it and Sandra Dee was given the "Tammy" sequel.

U-I didn't buy the song Debbie wrote for the "Tammy" sequel, so she's going to record it for Randy Wood of Dot Records—and right away. Unless, of course, she's talked out of it.

The shocking airplane accident which took the lives of six of the top young skaters leaves the U.S.A. without any contestants in the skating carnival at Prague. These youngsters were all possible Olympic winners.

My niece, Louella Rehfield, herself a skating instructor and three time winner in the Pacific Coast championship, knew all of these young people. She said that Laurence Owen had won the North American skating award, and it was thought she had a very good chance of winning the honors at Prague.

Figure skating champion Carol Heiss was so shaken by the news she could hardly work at 20th Century - Fox. Although the Prague carnival was called off after the accident it was decided to continue, and make it a memorial to all these young skaters.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I, too, went through the unhappy weight period, and may I tell Patsy and every husband who has an overweight wife how my husband and I licked the problem together?

Ted is gentle and considerate. He would never call me a slob — even though he may have thought it. After our third son was born I was immense. Ted would say to me, "Honey I wish you'd wear that pretty black dress I like so well." He knew the dress was a size 14 and I was about four sizes larger.

After a few months I had to admit to myself that I'd lost all interest in clothes and was just plain dowdy. Not only did I look like a cow but I was beginning to act like one. I went to the doctor and asked him to put me on a strict diet.

When I told my husband he was delighted. Every few days he'd compliment me. I began to feel better mentally and physically within two weeks. When my oldest son said to me, "Mom, I think you are so much better looking now than when you were 'husky'!" I knew I had won.

Most people who have a tendency toward obesity must watch themselves constantly. It takes encouragement and understanding. The husband who helps instead of hurts will be loved forever. —SIZE 14

DEAR SIZE 14: Many thanks for your excellent letter. The person who has been bitten by the wolf can best describe its fangs.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a widow 60 years of age. My son, who is 31, is a bachelor and he lives with me. My husband passed away 5 years ago and my son and I have a pleasant, peaceful life.

Many people have made snide remarks about this, hinting that something must be wrong with him, or with me. Should a son be kicked out of a home he enjoys just because his father passed away? Gene always lived at home and so far as I am concerned he can stay here as long as he likes. Do you see anything wrong with this? I would appreciate your coments.

—MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Most men, by the time they're 30, prefer to live away from the parental home. One who does not, however, need not be considered peculiar. It could be simply that he is comfortable there and has no desire to move out.

DEAR ANN: My daughter is 23, works in a cafe and could have lots of dates with decent young men. But no, she'd rather go with a married bum who is a liar as well.

He told Gloria he was living with his sister. She found out that he has no sister but he does have a wife and three kids. When she faced him with it he said he was afraid to tell her the truth for fear she'd quit him.

I don't want to butt into an adult woman's life, but being her mother I naturally want her to marry a good man. He's also 18 years older than Gloria but she says he's young at heart. Any advice or is it hopeless?

—MA

DEAR MA: So long as there's life there's hope. Tell Gloria he may be young at heart but the line he's been handing her is as old as the hills. When a girl goes with a man she becomes part of the home-wrecking crew. He's strictly bad news.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Fire Unit Explains Ambulance Cost

Joseph Wenrich of the Cresaptown Volunteer Fire Company met with the Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday to explain the procedure of fire companies which operate ambulances.

Wenrich said that he wished to clarify the impression of some people that county funds are used for the ambulance program. He said that the ambulance is paid for by the fire companies and county money paid to the various units is used strictly for fire fighting purposes.

He cited that during the past seven and a half months the Cresaptown unit made 51 ambulance trips.

County Workers Status Changed

A number of employes at the County Infirmary who have been listed as temporary workers were changed to part time status yesterday by the Allegany County Board of Commissioners.

The change will simplify the bookkeeping procedures and eliminate the necessity of renaming them at the expiration of the four-month period as had been required.

A group of residents on the Loartown Hill Road yesterday petitioned the Allegany County Board of Commissioners for snow removal work and cindering of that road.

It was stated in the petition that a school bus made five tries before a man placed ashes on the road to enable it to negotiate the steep grade. The matter was referred to Harry Skelly, roads supervisor.

LaVale Fire Company Plans Dinner Today

The annual anniversary dinner of the LaVale Volunteer Fire Department will be held today at 6:30 p. m. in the fire hall, according to Bruce Long, III, chairman of the dinner committee.

Myer Abramson, local salesman, will be toastmaster and John J. Hafer Sr. will speak on "Communism vs. Capitalism."

At this week's meeting, trustees reported on several improvements made in the department in the past year and also listed prices to be charged on various phases of hall rental during this year.

Reports were made by Paul Boch, chairman of the anniversary committee held January 28, and Henry Wintermyer, president, department representative to the Allegany-Garrett Firemen's Association, who spoke on last Sunday's association meeting.

Cromwell Zembower, secretary, stated that two members of the company are patients in local hospitals, L. B. Carter, a charter member, and Jerry Proud.

In a letter drafted by members to the LaVale Civic Improvement Association was asked to support a move to have the State Roads Commission paint red lines on the curbs at fire hydrants along Route 40 from Narrows Park to the Six-Mile House.

Laws Asked By County

The Allegany County Board of Commissioners has notified State Sen. Charles M. See of certain legislation which they want introduced in the General Assembly.

One bill would increase from $1,000 to $3,000 the limit required for public bidding when the county buys anything.

Another measure would amend the public local laws of Allegany County to provide that any magistrate or substitute magistrate may perform the duties of the Magistrate for Juvenile Court in the absence of the magistrate for juvenile causes.

The recent illness of Magistrate Louis Fatkin has pointed up the need for such an amendment.

Another amendment would provide that the County Planning and Zoning Commission would participate in their activities in any community under 10,000 population. This would affect every community, except the City of Cumberland.

Manager-Type Government Recommended

Finance Commissioner Lucile Roeder said yesterday she is proposing to the Mayor and Council that it consider taking the initative in setting up a new City Charter looking to a change from the commissioner form to the council-manager form of government here.

Copies of the proposal were distributed to council members yesterday, she said, ading that it is her belief present conditions, increases in population and more demands for services by citizens are making the present commissioner form of government "more outmoded and inefficient each day."

Mrs. Roeder said she would propose that Council name "three of our outstanding citizens to appoint a committee and recommend a new charter to the Mayor and Council. These citizens would be charged with removing municipal government from 'politics' and the diffusion of responsibility among several persons.

"In its stead, it would propose that the complex of government be placed in specially and technically-trained hands of a city manager," she added.

Under the council-manager plan, she said, the citizens still have the say. They elect a council which makes all policy. Council appoints the professionally-trained administrator to carry out these policies and the administrator is responsible to council.

"The council-manager form of government which came into being 53 years ago, is today the most democratic and efficient form of municipal government. It is a sensible way to handle municipal housekeeping and one big reason for its success is its simplicity," Mrs. Roeder added.

The council-manager form of government has been proposed here twice previously. In 1949, in a special election, it was defeated by only 54 votes, 2,678 to 2,624. Again in 1952, as an amendment on the general election ballot, it lost by a margin of 1,615 votes, 5,567 to 3,952. That year there were 11,123 votes cast.

Mrs. Roeder supported the council-manager plan both times and she said she still feels "It is the only solution to the inadequacies and inefficiency of the commissioner form of government.

"I invite the Mayor and Council to join me in this endeavor since I believe the first move in this direction should come from those who are charged with directing affairs of the city," she concluded.

The commissioner form of government has been in existence here since 1910.

Hearing On Resurfacing Central Avenue Set

Interested persons can attend the February 27 meeting of council at 10 a. m., when an ordinance for the project will be considered.

County Pays For Cost In Polio Cases

The Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday approved a request from the State Department of Health to pay 20 per cent of the cost of care and rehabilitation for two polio patients at the George Washington University Hospital in Washington, D.C.

Cost to the county will be $2,200 for the period ending June 30. The balance of the expense will be borne by the state agency.

The letter, from Dr. Perry F. Prather, director of the State Department of Health, said the two patients, Maxine McKenzie, 18, of Frostburg, and James Piper, 14, Oldtown, were stricken last year with bulbar polio and were transferred from a Baltimore hospital to the Washington institution because they can receive long-term treatment there.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis paid for their care until January 31 this year and will extend the payments depending on the success of the March of Dimes drive, according to Dr. Prather.

Road Project Fund Received

Harry Skelly, supervisor of the Allegany County Roads Department, yesterday submitted a check for $13,300 to the Board of County Commissioners for the matching funds from the federal government on a road project recently completed.

Skelly said the money represents the federal government's participation in the cost of the road base and surfacing. The work was done by county work forces.

The other costs such as fills, bank slopes and drainage were borne entirely by the county. Total cost to the county was approximately $23,000 Skelly said.

The road project consists of 1.4 miles of the Orleans Roads north from U.S. Route 40 to the Pennsylvania State line.

About 48 per cent of the residents of Paris, France, were born there.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — There's no worry visible in Dean Martin's crystal ball. He knows where his caviar and champagne are coming from with 11 pictures on his immediate slate. I might say there are 12 since he's negotiating for "Beau Geste" which he'll make as a musical for his own company, Jade Productions, after he finishes "Gunga Din" (his [illegible]th) with Frank Sinatra and Peter Lawford, for MGM.

On his schedule there's "Brent's Fort", a Western for Hal Wallis, and incidentally, the last under his contract with Wallis—"Toys in the Attic" for the Mirisch Bros., and he's also talking a three-picture deal with Spyros Skouras for 20th Century-Fox. Aside from that, Dean hasn't a thing to do.

Whether the off-again on-again romance of Kim Novak and director Richard Quine will blaze anew when he directs her in "Notorious Landlady" is anyone's guess.

Kim arrived back in Hollywood very quietly without a word to anyone and promptly put her signature on a contract to play opposite Jack Lemmon. Well, wouldn't any actress want to play opposite the popular Jack whose name is money in the box office? And besides, he always turns in a good comedy performance. Of course this movie is for Columbia.

Wanted! Noel Coward for the starring role in "No Bail for the Judge". Gant Gaither, who took over the producing job of this comedy-suspense tale from Alfred Hitchcock, cabled Noel at his home in Jamaica to see if he will make the picture.

Noel is expected in New York for rehearsals of his new play, and since Gaither says he doesn't expect to get "No Bail for the Judge" ready before summer, he's hopeful of getting Noel. Hagar Wilde is working on the script of the Henry Cecil book which was a big hit in London.

Had dinner at Au Petit Jean with Jane Wyman, Freddie Karger and Jimmy McHugh. Freddie entertained us with an account of what happened on his birthday Tuesday night at the Star on the Roof, where his orchestra is playing.

He said that Jack Lemmon and Richard Quine who were having dinner with Felicia Farr and Maggi Brown, discovered it was Freddie's birthday and they took over the orchestra, to the delight of the customers—"and," said Freddie, "I never got on all evening."

Jane was wearing a very stunning black and white knit suit and she said it was Freddie's Christmas gift to her. I think these two have a better understanding than when they were married and one of these days I won't be surprised if they remarry.

Ross Hunter, Sandra Dee, Universal-International and many others, aren't going to like Debbie Reynolds recording a tune called "Tammy, This Is True." She wrote the song when she thought she was going to be the star of "Tammy, Tell Me True," but because of her conflicting commitments she couldn't do it and Sandra Dee was given the "Tammy" sequel.

U-I didn't buy the song Debbie wrote for the "Tammy" sequel, so she's going to record it for Randy Wood of Dot Records—and right away. Unless, of course, she's talked out of it.

The shocking airplane accident which took the lives of six of the top young skaters leaves the U.S.A. without any contestants in the skating carnival at Prague. These youngsters were all possible Olympic winners.

My niece, Louella Rehfield, herself a skating instructor and three time winner in the Pacific Coast championship, knew all of these young people. She said that Laurence Owen had won the North American skating award, and it was thought she had a very good chance of winning the honors at Prague.

Figure skating champion Carol Heiss was so shaken by the news she could hardly work at 20th Century - Fox. Although the Prague carnival was called off after the accident it was decided to continue, and make it a memorial to all these young skaters.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I, too, went through the unhappy weight period, and may I tell Patsy and every husband who has an overweight wife how my husband and I licked the problem together?

Ted is gentle and considerate. He would never call me a slob — even though he may have thought it. After our third son was born I was immense. Ted would say to me, "Honey I wish you'd wear that pretty black dress I like so well." He knew the dress was a size 14 and I was about four sizes larger.

After a few months I had to admit to myself that I'd lost all interest in clothes and was just plain dowdy. Not only did I look like a cow but I was beginning to act like one. I went to the doctor and asked him to put me on a strict diet.

When I told my husband he was delighted. Every few days he'd compliment me. I began to feel better mentally and physically within two weeks. When my oldest son said to me, "Mom, I think you are so much better looking now than when you were 'husky'!" I knew I had won.

Most people who have a tendency toward obesity must watch themselves constantly. It takes encouragement and understanding. The husband who helps instead of hurts will be loved forever. —SIZE 14

DEAR SIZE 14: Many thanks for your excellent letter. The person who has been bitten by the wolf can best describe its fangs.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a widow 60 years of age. My son, who is 31, is a bachelor and he lives with me. My husband passed away 5 years ago and my son and I have a pleasant, peaceful life.

Many people have made snide remarks about this, hinting that something must be wrong with him, or with me. Should a son be kicked out of a home he enjoys just because his father passed away? Gene always lived at home and so far as I am concerned he can stay here as long as he likes. Do you see anything wrong with this? I would appreciate your coments.

—MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Most men, by the time they're 30, prefer to live away from the parental home. One who does not, however, need not be considered peculiar. It could be simply that he is comfortable there and has no desire to move out.

DEAR ANN: My daughter is 23, works in a cafe and could have lots of dates with decent young men. But no, she'd rather go with a married bum who is a liar as well.

He told Gloria he was living with his sister. She found out that he has no sister but he does have a wife and three kids. When she faced him with it he said he was afraid to tell her the truth for fear she'd quit him.

I don't want to butt into an adult woman's life, but being her mother I naturally want her to marry a good man. He's also 18 years older than Gloria but she says he's young at heart. Any advice or is it hopeless?

—MA

DEAR MA: So long as there's life there's hope. Tell Gloria he may be young at heart but the line he's been handing her is as old as the hills. When a girl goes with a man she becomes part of the home-wrecking crew. He's strictly bad news.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The annual anniversary dinner of the LaVale Volunteer Fire Department will be held today at 6:30 p. m. in the fire hall, according to Bruce Long, III, chairman of the dinner committee.

Myer Abramson, local salesman, will be toastmaster and John J. Hafer Sr. will speak on "Communism vs. Capitalism."

At this week's meeting, trustees reported on several improvements made in the department in the past year and also listed prices to be charged on various phases of hall rental during this year.

Reports were made by Paul Boch, chairman of the anniversary committee held January 28, and Henry Wintermyer, president, department representative to the Allegany-Garrett Firemen's Association, who spoke on last Sunday's association meeting.

Cromwell Zembower, secretary, stated that two members of the company are patients in local hospitals, L. B. Carter, a charter member, and Jerry Proud.

In a letter drafted by members to the LaVale Civic Improvement Association was asked to support a move to have the State Roads Commission paint red lines on the curbs at fire hydrants along Route 40 from Narrows Park to the Six-Mile House.

Laws Asked By County

The Allegany County Board of Commissioners has notified State Sen. Charles M. See of certain legislation which they want introduced in the General Assembly.

One bill would increase from $1,000 to $3,000 the limit required for public bidding when the county buys anything.

Another measure would amend the public local laws of Allegany County to provide that any magistrate or substitute magistrate may perform the duties of the Magistrate for Juvenile Court in the absence of the magistrate for juvenile causes.

The recent illness of Magistrate Louis Fatkin has pointed up the need for such an amendment.

Another amendment would provide that the County Planning and Zoning Commission would participate in their activities in any community under 10,000 population. This would affect every community, except the City of Cumberland.

Manager-Type Government Recommended

Finance Commissioner Lucile Roeder said yesterday she is proposing to the Mayor and Council that it consider taking the initative in setting up a new City Charter looking to a change from the commissioner form to the council-manager form of government here.

Copies of the proposal were distributed to council members yesterday, she said, ading that it is her belief present conditions, increases in population and more demands for services by citizens are making the present commissioner form of government "more outmoded and inefficient each day."

Mrs. Roeder said she would propose that Council name "three of our outstanding citizens to appoint a committee and recommend a new charter to the Mayor and Council. These citizens would be charged with removing municipal government from 'politics' and the diffusion of responsibility among several persons.

"In its stead, it would propose that the complex of government be placed in specially and technically-trained hands of a city manager," she added.

Under the council-manager plan, she said, the citizens still have the say. They elect a council which makes all policy. Council appoints the professionally-trained administrator to carry out these policies and the administrator is responsible to council.

"The council-manager form of government which came into being 53 years ago, is today the most democratic and efficient form of municipal government. It is a sensible way to handle municipal housekeeping and one big reason for its success is its simplicity," Mrs. Roeder added.

The council-manager form of government has been proposed here twice previously. In 1949, in a special election, it was defeated by only 54 votes, 2,678 to 2,624. Again in 1952, as an amendment on the general election ballot, it lost by a margin of 1,615 votes, 5,567 to 3,952. That year there were 11,123 votes cast.

Mrs. Roeder supported the council-manager plan both times and she said she still feels "It is the only solution to the inadequacies and inefficiency of the commissioner form of government.

"I invite the Mayor and Council to join me in this endeavor since I believe the first move in this direction should come from those who are charged with directing affairs of the city," she concluded.

The commissioner form of government has been in existence here since 1910.

County Pays For Cost In Polio Cases

The Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday approved a request from the State Department of Health to pay 20 per cent of the cost of care and rehabilitation for two polio patients at the George Washington University Hospital in Washington, D.C.

Cost to the county will be $2,200 for the period ending June 30. The balance of the expense will be borne by the state agency.

The letter, from Dr. Perry F. Prather, director of the State Department of Health, said the two patients, Maxine McKenzie, 18, of Frostburg, and James Piper, 14, Oldtown, were stricken last year with bulbar polio and were transferred from a Baltimore hospital to the Washington institution because they can receive long-term treatment there.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis paid for their care until January 31 this year and will extend the payments depending on the success of the March of Dimes drive, according to Dr. Prather.

Road Project Fund Received

Harry Skelly, supervisor of the Allegany County Roads Department, yesterday submitted a check for $13,300 to the Board of County Commissioners for the matching funds from the federal government on a road project recently completed.

Skelly said the money represents the federal government's participation in the cost of the road base and surfacing. The work was done by county work forces.

The other costs such as fills, bank slopes and drainage were borne entirely by the county. Total cost to the county was approximately $23,000 Skelly said.

The road project consists of 1.4 miles of the Orleans Roads north from U.S. Route 40 to the Pennsylvania State line.

About 48 per cent of the residents of Paris, France, were born there.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

A religious rumpus is on over words—and what they mean.

That, to a great extent, was the cause of the furore about Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike's comments on certain Christian concepts, such as the Garden of Eden story and the virgin birth of Christ.

He calls them myths. And this has stirred some sharp protests.

One reason is simple. In popular parlance, a myth is a fable—an untrue fantasy. But in theological terminology, the meaning is almost opposite—a myth is a method of depicting the deepest truths.

"A good myth is true," the California bishop says, adding that it is a useful way of communicating truth "especially truth which is complicated and which, when stated in straight prose, would sound contradictory."

The term, so understood, has come into common usage in major Protestant seminaries, under influence of such leading theoologians as Reinhold Niebuhr and Paul Tillich.

"Actually," said Bishop Pike, "what I've said hasn't been very original."

Nevertheless, it has raised some keen outcries.

Three Episcopal clergymen in the South—where Bishop Pike once ruffled feathers by refusing an honorary degree from a segregated university — have asked their bishop, the Very Rev. Albert R. Stuart, of Georgia, to bring heresy charges.

Such a case seems highly unlikely.

It would take Bishop Stuart and two other bishops even to lodge the charge formally. Then, to stand, it would have to go through two inquiry committees, a seven-bishop trial court, and win concurrence of two thirds of all Episcopal bishops.

However, the vigorous, 47-year-old Bishop Pike, a one-time Supreme Court attorney, law professor and former Roman Catholic, has a bent for rousing attention to his presentation of the faith.

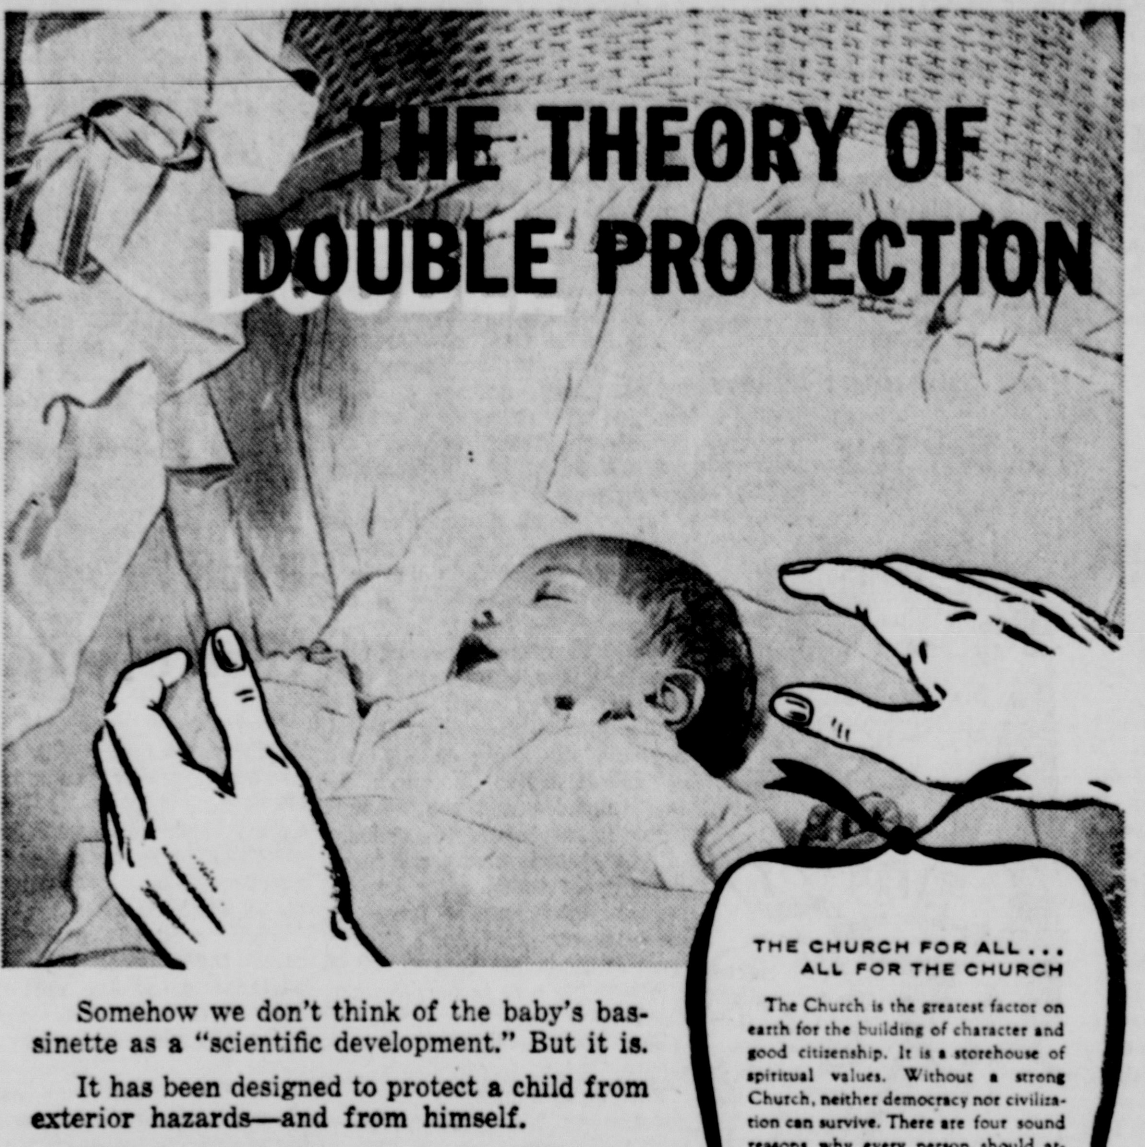
"It's a problem of communication," he said. "I want to get across the message in terms that are clear and relevant, and which distinguish the unessential packaging from the essential, unchanged product.

"It's a selling job. And sometimes, the traditional phraseology is not the best—at least not the only—way of packaging the same truths today."

As for basic Christian doctrines, including the virgin birth, Bishop Pike emphasizes he firmly believes them all, that he fully accepts the central confessions of faith—the Apostles and Nicene creeds.

"I wouldn't want them revised," he said in a telephone interview. "What they state is true. But we must explicate and explain them in the thought forms, frames of reference and idioms of our times."

He also emphasized that the creeds, like the Bible, in some cases couch truth in symbolic—or as the theologians put it, "mythological" — terms, without necessarily being precise about physical factors.



THE THEORY OF DOUBLE PROTECTION

Somehow we don't think of the baby's bassinette as a "scientific development." But it is.

It has been designed to protect a child from exterior hazards—and from himself.

Religion isn't what we would call "scientific." But it, too, embraces this theory of double protection.

The man or woman who worships God faithfully is prepared for the unexpected crises in life. And his mature conscience is ready to cope with temptation.

This isn't to say that nothing ever goes wrong for the ardent church-goer. But he meets each outward or inward challenge with adequate spiritual resources.

There are impelling reasons why you need the Church and its undergirding strength. And for every one that is evident today, there are others you'll confront tomorrow.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

A religious rumpus is on over words—and what they mean.

That, to a great extent, was the cause of the furore about Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike's comments on certain Christian concepts, such as the Garden of Eden story and the virgin birth of Christ.

He calls them myths. And this has stirred some sharp protests.

One reason is simple. In popular parlance, a myth is a fable—an untrue fantasy. But in theological terminology, the meaning is almost opposite—a myth is a method of depicting the deepest truths.

"A good myth is true," the California bishop says, adding that it is a useful way of communicating truth "especially truth which is complicated and which, when stated in straight prose, would sound contradictory."

The term, so understood, has come into common usage in major Protestant seminaries, under influence of such leading theologians as Reinhold Niebuhr and Paul Tillich.

"Actually," said Bishop Pike, "what I've said hasn't been very original."

Nevertheless, it has raised some keen outcries.

Three Episcopal clergymen in the South—where Bishop Pike once ruffled feathers by refusing an honorary degree from a segregated university — have asked their bishop, the Very Rev. Albert R. Stuart, of Georgia, to bring heresy charges.

Such a case seems highly unlikely.

It would take Bishop Stuart and two other bishops even to lodge the charge formally. Then, to stand, it would have to go through two inquiry committees, a seven-bishop trial court, and win concurrence of two thirds of all Episcopal bishops.

However, the vigorous, 47-year-old Bishop Pike, a one-time Supreme Court attorney, law professor and former Roman Catholic, has a bent for rousing attention to his presentation of the faith.

"It's a problem of communication," he said. "I want to get across the message in terms that are clear and relevant, and which distinguish the unessential packaging from the essential, unchanged product.

"It's a selling job. And sometimes, the traditional phraseology is not the best—at least not the only—way of packaging the same truths today."

As for basic Christian doctrines, including the virgin birth, Bishop Pike emphasizes he firmly believes them all, that he fully accepts the central confessions of faith—the Apostles and Nicene creeds.

"I wouldn't want them revised," he said in a telephone interview. "What they state is true. But we must explicate and explain them in the thought forms, frames of reference and idioms of our times."

He also emphasized that the creeds, like the Bible, in some cases couch truth in symbolic—or as the theologians put it, "mythological" — terms, without necessarily being precise about physical factors.

THE THEORY OF DOUBLE PROTECTION

Somehow we don't think of the baby's bassinette as a "scientific development." But it is.

It has been designed to protect a child from exterior hazards—and from himself.

Religion isn't what we would call "scientific." But it, too, embraces this theory of double protection.

The man or woman who worships God faithfully is prepared for the unexpected crises in life. And his mature conscience is ready to cope with temptation.

This isn't to say that nothing ever goes wrong for the ardent church-goer. But he meets each outward or inward challenge with adequate spiritual resources.

There are impelling reasons why you need the Church and its undergirding strength. And for every one that is evident today, there are others you'll confront tomorrow.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Space Projects And The Dollar

If the United States is going to spend more money on space projects, the military wants to be sure of getting its share. Exactly which military space projects should be pursued is the subject of a report prepared for the Air Force by a 15-member civilian committee.

Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, head of the Air Research and Development Command, initiated the project last autumn. The civilian scientists and industrialists on the committee were told to determine what military potentials there are in space, the role nuclear energy can play there, and the type of satellite "missile warning" systems the Air Force should push. On the basis of the report, Schriever will make recommendations to the Air Force top command.

The committee can be expected to favor more spending for military space projects. Its chairman is Trevor Gardner: he resigned in 1956 as Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Research and Development because of Pentagon refusal to ask Congress for what he considered adequate research and development funds.

Ordinarily, the report could be passed off lightly as an Air Force effort to feather its own nest. But it may have more than parochial interest because one of the committee members is Jerome B. Wiesner of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who recently was named special scientific adviser to President Kennedy.

Wiesner headed a Kennedy task force on space programs that recommended in a report January 11 that particular attention be given in the future to "the military uses of space," among other things. The task force suggested also that the military portion of the nation's space program be put under one agency or military service within the Department of Defense. The Air Force, of course, would be delighted to oblige; the new report may be a powerful instrument in furtherance of its hopes.

These Days

New Toys

Francis Robinson of the Metropolitan Opera repeated a sentence of Amelita Galli-Curci:

"You can't play with the same toys all your life."

I thought of this when I read a letter from a student in El Paso, Texas in which he took me to task. He says:

". . . I am an economics major at New Mexico State University which is co-educational and smoking is permitted in most all of the classes.

"The students wear, for the most part, dungarees or wash pants and sport shirts, the women—skirts and blouses.

"My argument is this; what is wrong with smoking or wearing 'hooligan' type clothes? If a person's private morals allow him to experience the pleasures of marriage without the responsibilities, then why censor him?

"This young generation is the first to grow up with the threat of complete thermo-nuclear destruction imminent . . .

"Therefor I only wish to point out to you that a generation judges another by the criteria it has set up. This is wrong, every generation is facing new problems, it must react differently from the last generation."

This raises many questions of the temporariness of propriety. It used to be that the President of the United States did not go a-visiting because if he called on one, how could he decline to call on another. But today, we have a new generation President who steps out to a movie show, visits a friend, sets up a bar in the White House. Is it right or wrong? Surely my young friend from El Paso would say: "What's the difference. Only old fogies go by protocol. If the President wants to receive President de Gaulle in dungarees and a sweat shirt, let him. Thank God, we don't have a President who is a stuffed shirt."

The question that stumps me is:

"If a person's private morals allow him to experience the pleasures of marriage without the responsibilities, then why censor him?"

The excuse for such a view is that this generation is the first to grow up under the influence of the atom bomb. Therefore, there are to be no moral standards, no responsibilities, no respect, no decorum. Are we to turn this country over to hooligans?

Of course, this is not a new point of view. Actually, many thought and acted that way in the generation of the flappers, Al Capone, hi-jacking and spiked beer. For a while anything went, but we got over that perhaps not too soon. It was the period when so-called society merged with gangsters and produced cafe society; it was a period when big businessmen found it profitable to associate with racketeers and when Murder, Inc. came into existence as a third party to labor disputes, being employed by both labor unions and industrialists.

The question that this student of the New Mexico State University raises is not the issue. We are not dealing with "the pleasures of marriage without the responsibilities," for there can be no marriages without responsibility. The issue is that an "economic major" at an American university should not have discovered that responsibility is an essential factor in life and that one who is irresponsible is literally mad. Are we to say that discipline — self-discipline most of all — is to disappear from our society?

William Benton discusses this question, from another standpoint, in a stirring article in "The Saturday Evening Post" in which he says:

"The most shameful part of the situation is that colleges supposed to provide guidance for the future are shortchanging youngsters — and their parents who foot the bills . . . A liberal-arts curriculum in a good school cuts superficiality to the bone and requires concentrated doses of English, mathematics, the natural sciences, history, psychology, economics and the humanities. Sure, it's tough, but tough subjects that tax a student's capacities develop the mental discipline and reasoning powers that can be projected to areas beyond a man's immediate experience."

But it is not only mental discipline but moral discipline that is essential. And moral discipline includes manners and the outward display of manners which is propriety of dress. Although styles in dress do change, the essence, which is neatness and esthetic acknowledgement never change. A dirty face and dirty hands and unkempt nails—the exterior trade mark of a Beatnik—can never be justified even by the fanciful assumption that frowziness is a mark of dissent. A boy can be angry with or without a beard.

Italian-American Congressmen Win Victory Over TV Program

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON— Italian-American Congressmen have won a partial victory in their protest against the television program, "The Untouchables." Officials of the American Broadcasting Company have promised to stop the program's ballyhooing of Italian-born characters as our chief "public enemies."

As a result, Congressman Alfred Santangelo of New York has withdrawn his threat to lead a picketing demonstration against Station WABC-TV, New York, originator of the show, on March 9.

Thomas Moore, ABC vice president, assured Santangelo and other Congressmen that "satisfactory changes" would be made both to limit Italian characterizations and to make it clear to viewers that "The Untouchables" was purely fictional.

"We are aware that the program went overboard in depicting most of these criminal characters as Italian-born," explained Moore. "However, there was nothing deliberate about this and we certainly meant no reflection on the good character and reputation of millions of Italian-Americans in this country.

"Since the show was fictional entertainment, we did not foresee these resentments that have developed."

"Well, whether you intended it that way or not, the show itself has lent the impression that it is not just fiction, but based on historic fact," protested Santangelo. "And never in my life have I seen a program in which history and fact have been so horribly mangled. The part about Al Capone trying to escape from a prison train is an example, just one example, of numerous distortions in this show.

"Al Capone attempted no such escape, but the viewing public certainly was led to believe that he did. Had he and his mobster friends tried any such thing, many Italian-American law enforcement officers, including some top FBI men at the time, would have been ready to thwart the escape. But you haven't told that side of the story."

"I could mention some other distortions that have been put over on the public by this show," broke in Congressman Peter Rodino of New Jersey. "For one thing, Al Capone wasn't born in Italy, though the program depicts him as planning to return to the 'old colntry,' if he managed to escape. To the best of my knowledge, he was born in Brooklyn."

Moore and another ABC vice president, Alfred Schneider, promised to exercise a tighter "self-censorship" over the program in the future. They also assured the protesting Congressmen that the format of the program would be changed to depict the outstanding role Italian-Americans have played in law enforcement.

However, this didn't completely satisfy Rodino. He suggested that the "best change" ABC officials could make in "The Untouchables" was to take it off the air entirely.

"This type of entertainment, fictional or otherwise, is of questionable value," said Rodino. "In my opinion, it greatly increases the job of law enforcers in controlling juvenile crime. I don't believe in government censorship of television shows, but you fellows may bring this on yourselves unless you undertake some rigid self-censorship."

Big New Problem: The Two-Headed Monster

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON

When President Kennedy meets with Nikita S. Khrushchev — as he is pretty sure to do by the end of April at the latest — one of the meeting's numerous handicaps will be, ironically enough, the incompleteness of Khrushchev's authority.

Kennedy, the leader of a loose alliance, can now speak for the West with fair confidence that his views will ultimately prevail in the councils of the West. But this is by no means the situation of Khrushchev, the dictator of the Soviet Union. Khrushchev is on warning, in fact, that if he seeks to speak for the Communist part of the world, his views will most emphatically not prevail throughout the Communist bloc.

For the American and other Western policy-makers, this is the most immediately important meaning of the astonishing, recently obtained documentation of the row between the Soviets and the Chinese Communists. These documents apparently take the form of a very full record of the proceedings of the prolonged secret conference of the leaders of the world's eighty Communist parties, which took place in Moscow in November.

The unofficial British Soviet expert, Edward Crankshaw, was the first with the news that this hardly credible record had been obtained, presumably from satellite sources, by the Western intelligence services. The same documents which Crankshaw summarized in an important article published over the weekend, are of course in the hands of the American government. American expert opinion confirmed Crankshaw's estimate that the documents reveal "the most serious crises the (world) Communist party has had to weather since the Russian revolution."

In this space and elsewhere, the existence of a Sino-Soviet disagreement has often been pointed out. The main issues dividing the two giants of the Communist bloc have also been described.

But the new documentation has now shown that the dispute is immeasurably deeper, more bitter, and more irreconcilable than had ever been imagined. At the Moscow conference, Khrushchev in effect called Mao Tse-tung every bad name in the Communist book. And the Chinese delegate in Moscow, Teng Hsiao-ping, replied to Khrushchev in kind before all the delegations there assembled.

The essence of the dispute is whether another world war is inevitable and, according to the Chinese, really almost desirable. Since the more furious exchanges only began when Khrushchev was moving towards a summit meeting with President Eisenhower, it is quite clear that Khrushchev's desire to negotiate with the leaders of the West was the catalyst that brought the Sino-Soviet differences so violently into the open.

Presumably Mao Tse-tung and the other Chinese leaders are just as enraged by the current spectacle of Khrushchev's moving heaven and earth to secure an early meeting with President Kennedy. The Moscow conference in November produced a lame, division-concealing formula leaving Khrushchev apparent freedom of action. But it is abundontly plain that this freedom of action does not include freedom to speak with authority for the Chinese.

Consider, for instance, how this affects one of the few areas where the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. have a vivid, undeniable common interest. Both this country and the Soviet Union will gain very greatly if they can reach agreement on an adequately policed suspension of nuclear tests. General test suspension will effectively close the nuclear club's membership list. Thus the two giants will confirm their own virtual nuclear monopoly, and they will enormously reduce the risk that haunts them both, of an accidental nuclear war. But the new documentation discloses that one of the subsidiary causes of Chinese discord with the Soviets has been the Kremlin's reluctance to add nuclear weapons to Communist China's arsenal. With grim persistence, the highly competent Chinese scientists are now laboring to provide the weapons the Kremlin has refused to provide.

What then is to happend at Geneva on March 20? The talks about nuclear test suspension will then be resumed by Arthur Dean, the able new disarmament negotiator chosen by President Kennedy and his chief disarmament advisor, John J. McCloy. But even if Dean and his Soviet opposite number can agree on a satisfactory inspection system to guarantee test-suspension, it will still be worthless if the inspection system omits the whole of China. And one can be sure the Chinese will resist inspection with utmost obstinacy, even if the Soviets approve it.

In short, the Western leaders must now face the fact that the Communist bloc is no longer a Kremlin-controlled monolith. Instead, it is a two-headed monster, whose heads are wholly at variance about the road the monster ought to take. The American policy-makers' inclination is still to see what can be accomplished, with the Soviets, and to hope that if anything is accomplished, the Soviets can bring the Chinese around. All the same, the monster's novel two-headedness constitutes a very big new problem.

NOTICE TO CONGRESS — As President John F. Kennedy discloses details of his program in messages to the Congress, he is giving the lie both to those who claimed he never really meant to fulfill his campaign promises and to those who charged he would be a free-spender and wildly inflationary.

What Kennedy has displayed so far indicates that he has his campaign promises well in mind and intends to fulfill them insofar as he can get Congress to go along. At the same time, he plans to propose government revenue recommendations to go along with any new spending programs.

Under present recession conditions, however, Kennedy is, in effect, spending money today and making revenue provisions to repay it tomorrow. He rejects the concept that the federal budget must be balanced year by year. Instead, he claims the test will be whether his administration, either four or eight years, will show a favorable balance of income vs. outgo.

The President is acting as though he had obtained the strongest possible mandate in last November's election. He seems, except occasionally, to be completely unmindful of the narrowness of his popular victory. And, according to administration insiders, that's the way it's going to be as long as he is in the White House.

Avoiding Wealth

By John Crosby

"It is easier to get rich in the United States today than ever before," said my son triumphantly.

"Now where did you get such a silly idea," I inquired.

"It says so right here in 'Look' magazine." And he showed me. Sure enough, there it was in black and white. An article called "Money" by Leonard Gross. It opened with: "It's easier to get rich in the United States today than ever before."

"If it's that easy to get rich, Daddy, why is it that you—"

"Why aren't you in school?" I snarled.

"There isn't any school. The Mayor closed all the schools because of the snow. Daddy, if it's so easy to get rich, how come we aren't—"

"Go play in the snow! Very good for you!"

"Practically everybody is rich except us, Daddy. It says right here this man Jameson started an electronics company with $3,000 and four years later he had $1,800,000. Why don't you do something like that?"

"Because I'm yatayating with you all day long! That's why," I snapped at him. "How can I get rich with you standing there yacking all day long. Why don't you go out and play and give me a chance to get rich."

Well, he's gone now. I suppose I'm expected to be rich by the time he gets back for lunch. Why the hell is "Look" magazine putting ideas like that in the heads of innocent children?

I picked up the magazine which has a gold cover this week. "All About Money" it says on the cover. "How It's Made," "How It Grows," "How It's Spent," "Can We Afford to Be Rich?"

Can we afford to be rich?

How would I know? I know I can't afford to be poor because my creditors keep nipping at my heels. But, if I can't afford to be rich either, what can I afford?

This "all about" monkeyshines is the latest lunacy of the magazines and I wish they'd get over it. "All About Puerto Rico," "All About Detroit," "All About Labor." Then they give you 224 pages (with color prints) about something you don't — like the little girl and the penguins — want to know that much about. I think it was "Life" started this nonsense. "The Good Life" will be the subject for a whole "Life" issue and inside they tell you that 2,000 correspondents and 4,822 photographers scattered from Nome to Miami labored two years to bring you this monstrous issue, telling you how happy and affluent you are.

I opened "Look" magazine. "Frank Jameson," it said in black type easily accessible to all small children, "is living proof that in our society today a man who wants to can still get rich. Jameson has no advanced degrees and no unusual talents. He is bright but no ingenious . . . "

Hmm! Fine lot of malarkey to put into naive young heads. I turned the page: "How to pick a stockbroker. A real pro can make you a fortune. Here are some inside tips." Good Lord, how am I going to explain that to the children? Everybody's doing it. But me. I turned another page. "Self Made Women." "She started with $250. Fifteen years later, she had her first million."

It could ruin your whole day, a magazine like that. I can remember back when it was fashionable to hate the rich. Now we elect them President of the United States. Or Governor of New York. The magazines come out with whole issues devoted to telling us that the rich are really like you and me.

Just to restore my morale, I dug out an old copy of "McClure's Magazine" that Ann Honeycutt gave me for Christmas, March, 1912, issue. The lead article's first sentence:

"One of the most significant phases of the present railroad situation is the extent to which the children of Jay Gould are losing control of the family enterprises. Of the dozen railroad lines that make up what is commonly known as the Gould system, only one is now paying dividends."

Now, that's more like it!

"The Goulds are losing control of their ancestral domain because, like the Vanderbilts, they have attempted to do two incompatible things—live lives of idleness and luxury, and at the same time control great enterprises."

Well, I feel much better. I've avoided becoming an idle wastrel by the skin of my teeth. Believe me, it's not been easy.

One In 250 Pregnancies Is Ectopic

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Most pregnancies are normal in that the fertilized ovum settles in the uterus, where it belongs. But one out of 250 takes root in the tube that leads to the uterus. After a few weeks of growth and development the egg becomes too large for the tube and serious internal bleeding occurs when the passageway ruptures.

One in 250 may not sound impressive but, in terms of our population, amounts to more than 21,000 cases annually. In the majority of these women, something inside the tube traps the fertilized ovum on its way to the uterus. The lining may be roughened, wrinkled, scarred, or narrowed as a result of a previous infection, injury, or a developmental disturbance. Tubal pregnancies usually occur in women between 25 and 35 years of age; one in four is past 35.

Tubal pregnancy is suspected whenever a woman misses a period and develops pelvic pain, spotting, or profuse bleeding approximately 2 weeks later. At this time the snared fertilized ovum is having growing pains and the tube is complaining because it is overstretched.

These warnings do not always occur in tubal pregnancy. Symptoms are variable until the tube is about to rupture. Agonizing pain then develops and the woman may go into shock from hemorrhage.

Immediate hospitalization is recommended because there is danger of a fatal hemorrhage. The nature of the emergency is better appreciated when we realize that every twelfth maternal death in Chicago, and every sixteenth in New York is due to ectopic pregnancy.

Since both tubes are likely to be involved, a woman who has had an ectopic pregnancy is 10 times more likely to have a second than are those who never had one before.

COLON OUTPOCKETS

E. E. L. K. writes: What causes diverticulas to form in the colon?

REPLY

No one knows why these tiny pockets develop in the wall of the intestine. They are found frequently in areas where the blood vessel pierces the wall. This suggests that diverticulas are protrusions thru weakened spots in the colon.

FISH SKIN

B. W. writes: What is ichthyosis?

REPLY

A congenial condition in which the body is covered with thickened, wrinkled skin resembling fish scales. It is better in summer and worse in winter. Dryness and itching are marked and soap aggravates these symptoms.

ROTATING STOMACH

M. E. writes: After drinking any kind of liquid, my innards make a noise like a washing machine turning over and over. What the dickens causes such a racket?

REPLY

The liquids churning about in the stomach, as they do in the washing machine — minus the slips and shirts.

LEAVE POUCH ALONE

M. A. writes: Need anything be done about a diverticulum in the esophagus that causes no symptoms?

REPLY

No. Surgery is advised only when the pocket leads to regurgitation or difficulty in swallowing.

PSORIASIS NOT CONTAGIOUS

C. G. writes: Is it safe to use the same swimming pool as a person who has psoriasis?

REPLY

Yes. And for the millionth time — psoriasis is not contagious.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Space Projects And The Dollar

If the United States is going to spend more money on space projects, the military wants to be sure of getting its share. Exactly which military space projects should be pursued is the subject of a report prepared for the Air Force by a 15-member civilian committee.

Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, head of the Air Research and Development Command, initiated the project last autumn. The civilian scientists and industrialists on the committee were told to determine what military potentials there are in space, the role nuclear energy can play there, and the type of satellite "missile warning" systems the Air Force should push. On the basis of the report, Schriever will make recommendations to the Air Force top command.

The committee can be expected to favor more spending for military space projects. Its chairman is Trevor Gardner: he resigned in 1956 as Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Research and Development because of Pentagon refusal to ask Congress for what he considered adequate research and development funds.

Ordinarily, the report could be passed off lightly as an Air Force effort to feather its own nest. But it may have more than parochial interest because one of the committee members is Jerome B. Wiesner of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who recently was named special scientific adviser to President Kennedy.

Wiesner headed a Kennedy task force on space programs that recommended in a report January 11 that particular attention be given in the future to "the military uses of space," among other things. The task force suggested also that the military portion of the nation's space program be put under one agency or military service within the Department of Defense. The Air Force, of course, would be delighted to oblige; the new report may be a powerful instrument in furtherance of its hopes.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

New Toys

Francis Robinson of the Metropolitan Opera repeated a sentence of Amelita Galli-Curci:

"You can't play with the same toys all your life."

I thought of this when I read a letter from a student in El Paso, Texas in which he took me to task. He says:

". . . I am an economics major at New Mexico State University which is co-educational and smoking is permitted in most all of the classes.

"The students wear, for the most part, dungarees or wash pants and sport shirts, the women—skirts and blouses.

"My argument is this; what is wrong with smoking or wearing 'hooligan' type clothes? If a person's private morals allow him to experience the pleasures of marriage without the responsibilities, then why censor him?

"This young generation is the first to grow up with the threat of complete thermo-nuclear destruction imminent . . .

"Therefor I only wish to point out to you that a generation judges another by the criteria it has set up. This is wrong, every generation is facing new problems, it must react differently from the last generation."

This raises many questions of the temporariness of propriety. It used to be that the President of the United States did not go a-visiting because if he called on one, how could he decline to call on another. But today, we have a new generation President who steps out to a movie show, visits a friend, sets up a bar in the White House. Is it right or wrong? Surely my young friend from El Paso would say: "What's the difference. Only old fogies go by protocol. If the President wants to receive President de Gaulle in dungarees and a sweat shirt, let him. Thank God, we don't have a President who is a stuffed shirt."

The question that stumps me is:

"If a person's private morals allow him to experience the pleasures of marriage without the responsibilities, then why censor him?"

The excuse for such a view is that this generation is the first to grow up under the influence of the atom bomb. Therefore, there are to be no moral standards, no responsibilities, no respect, no decorum. Are we to turn this country over to hooligans?

Of course, this is not a new point of view. Actually, many thought and acted that way in the generation of the flappers, Al Capone, hi-jacking and spiked beer. For a while anything went, but we got over that perhaps not too soon. It was the period when so-called society merged with gangsters and produced cafe society; it was a period when big businessmen found it profitable to associate with racketeers and when Murder, Inc. came into existence as a third party to labor disputes, being employed by both labor unions and industrialists.

The question that this student of the New Mexico State University raises is not the issue. We are not dealing with "the pleasures of marriage without the responsibilities," for there can be no marriages without responsibility. The issue is that an "economic major" at an American university should not have discovered that responsibility is an essential factor in life and that one who is irresponsible is literally mad. Are we to say that discipline — self-discipline most of all — is to disappear from our society?

William Benton discusses this question, from another standpoint, in a stirring article in "The Saturday Evening Post" in which he says:

"The most shameful part of the situation is that colleges supposed to provide guidance for the future are shortchanging youngsters — and their parents who foot the bills . . . A liberal-arts curriculum in a good school cuts superficiality to the bone and requires concentrated doses of English, mathematics, the natural sciences, history, psychology, economics and the humanities. Sure, it's tough, but tough subjects that tax a student's capacities develop the mental discipline and reasoning powers that can be projected to areas beyond a man's immediate experience."

But it is not only mental discipline but moral discipline that is essential. And moral discipline includes manners and the outward display of manners which is propriety of dress. Although styles in dress do change, the essence, which is neatness and esthetic acknowledgement never change. A dirty face and dirty hands and unkempt nails—the exterior trade mark of a Beatnik—can never be justified even by the fanciful assumption that frowziness is a mark of dissent. A boy can be angry with or without a beard.

Italian-American Congressmen Win Victory Over TV Program

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON— Italian-American Congressmen have won a partial victory in their protest against the television program, "The Untouchables." Officials of the American Broadcasting Company have promised to stop the program's ballyhooing of Italian-born characters as our chief "public enemies."

As a result, Congressman Alfred Santangelo of New York has withdrawn his threat to lead a picketing demonstration against Station WABC-TV, New York, originator of the show, on March 9.

NOTICE TO CONGRESS — As President John F. Kennedy discloses details of his program in messages to the Congress, he is giving the lie both to those who claimed he never really meant to fulfill his campaign promises and to those who charged he would be a free-spender and wildly inflationary.

What Kennedy has displayed so far indicates that he has his campaign promises well in mind and intends to fulfill them insofar as he can get Congress to go along. At the same time, he plans to propose government revenue recommendations to go along with any new spending programs.

Under present recession conditions, however, Kennedy is, in effect, spending money today and making revenue provisions to repay it tomorrow. He rejects the concept that the federal budget must be balanced year by year. Instead, he claims the test will be whether his administration, either four or eight years, will show a favorable balance of income vs. outgo.

The President is acting as though he had obtained the strongest possible mandate in last November's election. He seems, except occasionally, to be completely unmindful of the narrowness of his popular victory. And, according to administration insiders, that's the way it's going to be as long as he is in the White House.

Avoiding Wealth

By John Crosby

"It is easier to get rich in the United States today than ever before," said my son triumphantly.

"Now where did you get such a silly idea," I inquired.

"It says so right here in 'Look' magazine." And he showed me. Sure enough, there it was in black and white. An article called "Money" by Leonard Gross. It opened with: "It's easier to get rich in the United States today than ever before."

"If it's that easy to get rich, Daddy, why is it that you—"

"Why aren't you in school?" I snarled.

"There isn't any school. The Mayor closed all the schools because of the snow. Daddy, if it's so easy to get rich, how come we aren't—"

"Go play in the snow! Very good for you!"

"Practically everybody is rich except us, Daddy. It says right here this man Jameson started an electronics company with $3,000 and four years later he had $1,800,000. Why don't you do something like that?"

"Because I'm yatayating with you all day long! That's why," I snapped at him. "How can I get rich with you standing there yacking all day long. Why don't you go out and play and give me a chance to get rich."

Well, he's gone now. I suppose I'm expected to be rich by the time he gets back for lunch. Why the hell is "Look" magazine putting ideas like that in the heads of innocent children?

I picked up the magazine which has a gold cover this week. "All About Money" it says on the cover. "How It's Made," "How It Grows," "How It's Spent," "Can We Afford to Be Rich?"

Can we afford to be rich?

How would I know? I know I can't afford to be poor because my creditors keep nipping at my heels. But, if I can't afford to be rich either, what can I afford?

This "all about" monkeyshines is the latest lunacy of the magazines and I wish they'd get over it. "All About Puerto Rico," "All About Detroit," "All About Labor." Then they give you 224 pages (with color prints) about something you don't — like the little girl and the penguins — want to know that much about. I think it was "Life" started this nonsense. "The Good Life" will be the subject for a whole "Life" issue and inside they tell you that 2,000 correspondents and 4,822 photographers scattered from Nome to Miami labored two years to bring you this monstrous issue, telling you how happy and affluent you are.

I opened "Look" magazine. "Frank Jameson," it said in black type easily accessible to all small children, "is living proof that in our society today a man who wants to can still get rich. Jameson has no advanced degrees and no unusual talents. He is bright but no ingenious . . . "

Hmm! Fine lot of malarkey to put into naive young heads. I turned the page: "How to pick a stockbroker. A real pro can make you a fortune. Here are some inside tips." Good Lord, how am I going to explain that to the children? Everybody's doing it. But me. I turned another page. "Self Made Women." "She started with $250. Fifteen years later, she had her first million."

It could ruin your whole day, a magazine like that. I can remember back when it was fashionable to hate the rich. Now we elect them President of the United States. Or Governor of New York. The magazines come out with whole issues devoted to telling us that the rich are really like you and me.

Just to restore my morale. I dug out an old copy of "McClure's Magazine" that Ann Honeycutt gave me for Christmas, March, 1912, issue. The lead article's first sentence:

"One of the most significant phases of the present railroad situation is the extent to which the children of Jay Gould are losing control of the family enterprises. Of the dozen railroad lines that make up what is commonly known as the Gould system, only one is now paying dividends."

Now, that's more like it!

"The Goulds are losing control of their ancestral domain because, like the Vanderbilts, they have attempted to do two incompatible things—live lives of idleness and luxury, and at the same time control great enterprises."

Well, I feel much better. I've avoided becoming an idle wastrel by the skin of my teeth. Believe me, it's not been easy.

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Most pregnancies are normal in that the fertilized ovum settles in the uterus, where it belongs. But one out of 250 takes root in the tube that leads to the uterus. After a few weeks of growth and development the egg becomes too large for the tube and serious internal bleeding occurs when the passageway ruptures.

One in 250 may not sound impressive but, in terms of our population, amounts to more than 21,000 cases annually. In the majority of these women, something inside the tube traps the fertilized ovum on its way to the uterus. The lining may be roughened, wrinkled, scarred, or narrowed as a result of a previous infection, injury, or a developmental disturbance. Tubal pregnancies usually occur in women between 25 and 35 years of age; one in four is past 35.

Tubal pregnancy is suspected whenever a woman misses a period and develops pelvic pain, spotting, or profuse bleeding approximately 2 weeks later. At this time the snared fertilized ovum is having growing pains and the tube is complaining because it is overstretched.

These warnings do not always occur in tubal pregnancy. Symptoms are variable until the tube is about to rupture. Agonizing pain then develops and the woman may go into shock from hemorrhage.

Immediate hospitalization is recommended because there is danger of a fatal hemorrhage. The nature of the emergency is better appreciated when we realize that every twelfth maternal death in Chicago, and every sixteenth in New York is due to ectopic pregnancy.

Since both tubes are likely to be involved, a woman who has had an ectopic pregnancy is 10 times more likely to have a second than are those who never had one before.

COLON OUTPOCKETS

E. E. L. K. writes: What causes diverticulas to form in the colon?

REPLY

No one knows why these tiny pockets develop in the wall of the intestine. They are found frequently in areas where the blood vessel pierces the wall. This suggests that diverticulas are protrusions thru weakened spots in the colon.

FISH SKIN

B. W. writes: What is ichthyosis?

REPLY

A congenial condition in which the body is covered with thickened, wrinkled skin resembling fish scales. It is better in summer and worse in winter. Dryness and itching are marked and soap aggravates these symptoms.

ROTATING STOMACH

M. E. writes: After drinking any kind of liquid, my innards make a noise like a washing machine turning over and over. What the dickens causes such a racket?

REPLY

The liquids churning about in the stomach, as they do in the washing machine — minus the slips and shirts.

LEAVE POUCH ALONE

M. A. writes: Need anything be done about a diverticulum in the esophagus that causes no symptoms?

REPLY

No. Surgery is advised only when the pocket leads to regurgitation or difficulty in swallowing.

PSORIASIS NOT CONTAGIOUS

C. G. writes: Is it safe to use the same swimming pool as a person who has psoriasis?

REPLY

Yes. And for the millionth time — psoriasis is not contagious.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

Mrs. Smith just loved spiritualists, and usually dragged her young daughter Rosie in with her when she spotted a new one. On the boardwalk of Atlantic City she discovered a spiritualist who rashly accepted Rosie's challenge. "I wanna talk to my Uncle Harold." A light flashed, a gong sounded, and a sepulchral voice announced, "Hello, Rosie, I'm your Uncle Harold."

"Uncle Harold," cried Rosie. "What are you doing up in heaven? You ain't dead yet!"

W. Va. Liquor Bill Passes State Senate

House Vote Set By Middle Of Week

By BILL BARRETT

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The biggest step ever toward possible legalizing liquor-by-the-drink in West Virginia was taken Friday.

The State Senate passed by a vote of 24-8 — two votes above the necessary two-thirds majority —a resolution calling for a Constitutional Amendment to be submitted in the 1962 general election on the question.

It now goes to the House for concurrence and a vote is expected by the middle of next week. Proponents predicted it will be adopted.

There was no debate on the issue in the Senate, but 12 senators took time to explain their votes in the 20-minute necessary to run the roll call.

Before the vote was taken, Sen. J. Horner Davis, D-Kanawha, moved on behalf of himself and Sen. Clarence Martin, D-Berkeley, former majority leader, to amend the resolution further. On Thursday they had succeeded in writing into the proposed constitutional change language to restrict licensing of places that could sell whisky by the shot.

Davis said the change Friday was designed to "make sure there was no misinterpretation of intent" in spelling out that licenses could be obtained by "legitimate restaurants, hotels, clubs" and "similar facilities owned, controlled, leased or operated by the state."

Right To Vote

Eight senators who explained their vote favoring adoption of the resolution concentrated on the theme "the people have a right to express their desires in this matter."

The opponents held firm to a belief that liquor-by-the-drink was morally wrong and would be injurious to the state and its young people.

Sens. Paul Moore, D-Jackson, and William Tompos, D-Hancock, injected their war service into the comments.

"I fought for two years in Europe during World War II for democracy," said Moore. "One of those things involved is the right to vote and I therefore vote 'yes' on this question."

"My service was in the jungles of the South Pacific," Tompos related. "I do not feel that it is right to deny the people of West Virginia any kind of referendum."

Sen. R. E. Barnett, D-Mercer, observed, "I believe in the rights of the people and their ability to decide controversial issues. Though I vote yes today, it does not necessarily mean, I would vote yes on the question at the polls."

May Vote Wednesday

The measure now goes to the House of Delegates. Proponents of the measure were thinking Friday of possibly trying to set up a passage vote by next Wednesday. To do this would take majority approval Monday to have the resolution read the first of three times required under constitutional rules.

If they dispense with committee reference only, in view of House Temperance Committee approval of a similar measure, then the vote will be taken next Thursday.

Industrial Aid Measures Get Senate Sanction

By CARLO J. SALZANO

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Two measures proposed by Gov. W. W. Barron as aids to an expanded industrial development program for West Virginia were passed by the State Senate Friday.

Senators gave unanimous approval to a bill to create a new state department of commerce which would absorb the present State Industrial and Publicity Commission, the Economic Development Agency and the publicity division of the Conservation Commission.

And on a 27-5 vote a measure to set up a lending agency—the industrial development authority — to help finance industry locating in the state was approved.

Opponents of the development authority bill held to the belief that it was unconstitutional for the state to lend funds in such a manner.

Help Unemployed

Barron, in his Jan. 18 address to the Legislature, requested approval of the two plans and said both would tend to help overcome the "economic insecurity, due to unemployment," facing the state.

There was a flury in the House revolving around a parliamentary procedure. It concerned a message announcing approval Thursday by the Senate of a bill to give university status to Marshall College.

When the message was received, Majority Leader W. T. Brotherton Jr., D-Kanawha, recommended committee reference be dispensed with in view of the fact the House Education Committee earlier had recommended passage of an identical bill.

Del. Hugh Kincaid, D-Cabell, shortly afterward, attempted to have the bill read a first time but House Speaker Julius Singleton explained that since the request had not come when the bill was up for consideration it took a two-thirds vote to suspend House rules.

This was not attempted.

The Senate - approved measure will be at first reading Monday and the House version is at passage stage with the right to amend. A vote is expected to be taken on it and then a request made of the Senate to concur.

In other legislative action Friday:

Seek Funds

— The House adopted a resolution asking Congress to appropriate funds for construction of a dam on Cheat River near Rowlesburg, Preston County.

— The Senate passed 30-0 a bill to give West Virginia University authority to set up its own campus security officer system.

— The Senate passed 31-0 a measure to give the University Board of Governors authority to establish self - supporting graduate centers in the fields of commerce or business administration similar to those now operating for science and engineering in the Charleston area.

The Senate passed 31-0, a bill to give tubercular institution officials authority to obtain warrants under which court - committed patients who escape could be returned to the institutions.

W. Va. Liquor Bill Passes State Senate

House Vote Set By Middle Of Week

By BILL BARRETT

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The biggest step ever toward possible legalizing liquor-by-the-drink in West Virginia was taken Friday.

The State Senate passed by a vote of 24-8 — two votes above the necessary two-thirds majority —a resolution calling for a Constitutional Amendment to be submitted in the 1962 general election on the question.

It now goes to the House for concurrence and a vote is expected by the middle of next week. Proponents predicted it will be adopted.

There was no debate on the issue in the Senate, but 12 senators took time to explain their votes in the 20-minute necessary to run the roll call.

Before the vote was taken, Sen. J. Horner Davis, D-Kanawha, moved on behalf of himself and Sen. Clarence Martin, D-Berkeley, former majority leader, to amend the resolution further. On Thursday they had succeeded in writing into the proposed constitutional change language to restrict licensing of places that could sell whisky by the shot.

Davis said the change Friday was designed to "make sure there was no misinterpretation of intent" in spelling out that licenses could be obtained by "legitimate restaurants, hotels, clubs" and "similar facilities owned, controlled, leased or operated by the state."

Right To Vote

Eight senators who explained their vote favoring adoption of the resolution concentrated on the theme "the people have a right to express their desires in this matter."

The opponents held firm to a belief that liquor-by-the-drink was morally wrong and would be injurious to the state and its young people.

Sens. Paul Moore, D-Jackson, and William Tompos, D-Hancock, injected their war service into the comments.

"I fought for two years in Europe during World War II for democracy," said Moore. "One of those things involved is the right to vote and I therefore vote 'yes' on this question."

"My service was in the jungles of the South Pacific," Tompos related. "I do not feel that it is right to deny the people of West Virginia any kind of referendum."

Sen. R. E. Barnett, D-Mercer, observed, "I believe in the rights of the people and their ability to decide controversial issues. Though I vote yes today, it does not necessarily mean, I would vote yes on the question at the polls."

May Vote Wednesday

The measure now goes to the House of Delegates. Proponents of the measure were thinking Friday of possibly trying to set up a passage vote by next Wednesday. To do this would take majority approval Monday to have the resolution read the first of three times required under constitutional rules.

If they dispense with committee reference only, in view of House Temperance Committee approval of a similar measure, then the vote will be taken next Thursday.

Industrial Aid Measures Get Senate Sanction

By CARLO J. SALZANO

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Two measures proposed by Gov. W. W. Barron as aids to an expanded industrial development program for West Virginia were passed by the State Senate Friday.

Senators gave unanimous approval to a bill to create a new state department of commerce which would absorb the present State Industrial and Publicity Commission, the Economic Development Agency and the publicity division of the Conservation Commission.

And on a 27-5 vote a measure to set up a lending agency—the industrial development authority — to help finance industry locating in the state was approved.

Opponents of the development authority bill held to the belief that it was unconstitutional for the state to lend funds in such a manner.

Help Unemployed

Barron, in his Jan. 18 address to the Legislature, requested approval of the two plans and said both would tend to help overcome the "economic insecurity, due to unemployment," facing the state.

There was a flury in the House revolving around a parliamentary procedure. It concerned a message announcing approval Thursday by the Senate of a bill to give university status to Marshall College.

When the message was received, Majority Leader W. T. Brotherton Jr., D-Kanawha, recommended committee reference be dispensed with in view of the fact the House Education Committee earlier had recommended passage of an identical bill.

Del. Hugh Kincaid, D-Cabell, shortly afterward, attempted to have the bill read a first time but House Speaker Julius Singleton explained that since the request had not come when the bill was up for consideration it took a two-thirds vote to suspend House rules.

This was not attempted.

The Senate - approved measure will be at first reading Monday and the House version is at passage stage with the right to amend. A vote is expected to be taken on it and then a request made of the Senate to concur.

In other legislative action Friday:

Seek Funds

— The House adopted a resolution asking Congress to appropriate funds for construction of a dam on Cheat River near Rowlesburg, Preston County.

— The Senate passed 30-0 a bill to give West Virginia University authority to set up its own campus security officer system.

— The Senate passed 31-0 a measure to give the University Board of Governors authority to establish self - supporting graduate centers in the fields of commerce or business administration similar to those now operating for science and engineering in the Charleston area.

The Senate passed 31-0, a bill to give tubercular institution officials authority to obtain warrants under which court - committed patients who escape could be returned to the institutions.

Campers Defeat Fort Hill, 70-67, Win Class A Title

Pope Scores 27 To Spark Allegany Win

WMI STANDINGS

Team	W.	L.	Pct.

Fort Hill	5	4	.556
Beall	6	3	.667
Mt. Savage	3	6	.333
Valley	0	9	.000

GAME TONIGHT
Allegany at Mt. Savage

Allegany's Campers, whose homestretch performances this season have been anything but predictable, suffered a fourth period letdown last night and just barely managed to hold off an oncharging Fort Hill quint, 70-67, before a near capacity audience at Campobello.

The Campers, who at one stage led by 21 points, clinched one championship and took a giant stride toward two others. The sweep over Fort Hill, whom they had beaten earlier by a 58-50 score, gave Coach Chet Paynes' crew the Class A title and the right to represent Allegany County in the district championship playoffs.

Tonight the Campers will be heavily favored to wrap up their 24th WMI League championship in 41 years when they travel to Mt. Savage for a game with the Indians. Allegany is assured of at least a tie for the city crown with a 3-0 mark and one intracity game remaining — that with LaSalle (1-1) next Friday at SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium. Fort Hill is 0-3 in city competition.

Sentinels' Shooting Off

The visiting Sentinels, who had shot phenomenally from the floor the past week in upsetting Beall and Martinsburg on their home court, couldn't get their sights zeroed in last night, many of their shots including seemingly easy ones from under the basket, falling way off the mark.

In the last period, however, when they scored 26 points to Alcos' 12, the Red Raiders began hitting with some consistency, particularly in the closing moments of the game which at times had threatened to turn into a complete rout.

Dick Peck's jump shot with nine seconds remaining was the eighth field goal scored by the Sentinels in the final period.

Following Peck's goal, the final scoring play of the evening, Allegany put the ball in bounds but quickly lost it. Fort Hill immediately called time out. Only four seconds were left when play resumed. Ronnie Manges took the last shot of the game, a jumper from the middle of the key that fell short.

Trio Sparks Rally

Peck, Manges and Sheetz sparked the final drive which saw Jimmy Eckard's club battle back from a 15-point 68-53 deficit with less than three minutes to play. With slightly more than a minute to go, Fort Hill still trailed by ten. Manges and Allegany's Doug Luzier traded baskets, then Manges came back with a jumper, Jim Rice made three free throws in rapid succession and Peck canned his field goal.

The Campers, who moved right out in front on Bob Gaffney's tip-in with only four seconds gone, led all the way and twice in the third quarter built the advantage to 21 points—at 54-33 and 56-35.

Merv Pope, Allegany's jumping jack, scored 27 points and pulled off 17 rebounds. Of Pope's 10 field goals, four came from under the basket on pin-point feeds from little Wayne Shook, the Campers' hustling play-maker.

Allegany out-rebounded the Sentinels in every period but the fourth and wound up with a 54-45 edge in that department. Eight of the 12 rebounds hauled in by Allegany in the final quarter were picked off by Pope. Glen Shipway snared 15 and Peck 12 for the losers.

Campers Shoot .412

Two other Camper cagers scored in double figures. Jerry Pentoney collected 15 points and Gaffney 10. Gaffney had a like number of rebounds. Allegany's overall shooting percentage was .412, with 28 field goals in 68 attempts. Fort Hill made 23 of 76 for a sub-par .303 mark. The Sentinels had an edge at the free throw line, where they converted 21 of 34 to the winners' 14-23.

Four Sentinels were in double digits, headed by Bill Sheetz's 16 tallies. Shipway, who fouled out with 1:39 remaining, finished with 15, Peck had 14 and Manges 11.

Campers Defeat Fort Hill, 70-67, Win Class A Title

GAME TONIGHT
Allegany at Mt. Savage

Allegany's Campers, whose homestretch performances this season have been anything but predictable, suffered a fourth period letdown last night and just barely managed to hold off an oncharging Fort Hill quint, 70-67, before a near capacity audience at Campobello.

The Campers, who at one stage led by 21 points, clinched one championship and took a giant stride toward two others. The sweep over Fort Hill, whom they had beaten earlier by a 58-50 score, gave Coach Chet Paynes' crew the Class A title and the right to represent Allegany County in the district championship playoffs.

Tonight the Campers will be heavily favored to wrap up their 24th WMI League championship in 41 years when they travel to Mt. Savage for a game with the Indians. Allegany is assured of at least a tie for the city crown with a 3-0 mark and one intracity game remaining — that with LaSalle (1-1) next Friday at SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium. Fort Hill is 0-3 in city competition.

Sentinels' Shooting Off

The visiting Sentinels, who had shot phenomenally from the floor the past week in upsetting Beall and Martinsburg on their home court, couldn't get their sights zeroed in last night, many of their shots including seemingly easy ones from under the basket, falling way off the mark.

In the last period, however, when they scored 26 points to Alcos' 12, the Red Raiders began hitting with some consistency, particularly in the closing moments of the game which at times had threatened to turn into a complete rout.

Dick Peck's jump shot with nine seconds remaining was the eighth field goal scored by the Sentinels in the final period.

Following Peck's goal, the final scoring play of the evening, Allegany put the ball in bounds but quickly lost it. Fort Hill immediately called time out. Only four seconds were left when play resumed. Ronnie Manges took the last shot of the game, a jumper from the middle of the key that fell short.

Trio Sparks Rally

Peck, Manges and Sheetz sparked the final drive which saw Jimmy Eckard's club battle back from a 15-point 68-53 deficit with less than three minutes to play. With slightly more than a minute to go, Fort Hill still trailed by ten. Manges and Allegany's Doug Luzier traded baskets, then Manges came back with a jumper, Jim Rice made three free throws in rapid succession and Peck canned his field goal.

The Campers, who moved right out in front on Bob Gaffney's tip-in with only four seconds gone, led all the way and twice in the third quarter built the advantage to 21 points—at 54-33 and 56-35.

Merv Pope, Allegany's jumping jack, scored 27 points and pulled off 17 rebounds. Of Pope's 10 field goals, four came from under the basket on pin-point feeds from little Wayne Shook, the Campers' hustling play-maker.

Allegany out-rebounded the Sentinels in every period but the fourth and wound up with a 54-45 edge in that department. Eight of the 12 rebounds hauled in by Allegany in the final quarter were picked off by Pope. Glen Shipway snared 15 and Peck 12 for the losers.

Campers Shoot .412

Two other Camper cagers scored in double figures. Jerry Pentoney collected 15 points and Gaffney 10. Gaffney had a like number of rebounds. Allegany's overall shooting percentage was .412, with 28 field goals in 68 attempts. Fort Hill made 23 of 76 for a sub-par .303 mark. The Sentinels had an edge at the free throw line, where they converted 21 of 34 to the winners' 14-23.

Four Sentinels were in double digits, headed by Bill Sheetz's 16 tallies. Shipway, who fouled out with 1:39 remaining, finished with 15, Peck had 14 and Manges 11.

Leads National Loop Scorers With 280

Doug Arrowood pumped in 44 points last Saturday against Calvary EUB to set a new one-game individual scoring mark for the season and boosted his scoring average to 23.3 in the YMCA Sunday School Basketball League.

Arrowood, all-star center for First Methodist's team in the National Division, maintained his big margin in the divisional scoring race this year by upping his total to 280 for 12 games.

Arrowood held a 51-point margin at the halfway mark when his 179 points in eight games bested John Roy's 128. Roy has now slipped to third place in scoring with 196 in 13 contests.

With Roy and Jewell moving up, Salvation Army's Mickey Keller dropped back from third to fourth position. He has tallied 151 points in 12 games.

George Gill, Central Methodist, made the biggest jump, scoring 65 points in four games to move from 14th place to sixth.

Arrowood has bombed the nets for 101 points in his last four games, a 25.2 average, and the lanky center has six more to play. At his present scoring pace he could reach 400 points for the season.

The First Methodist cager also has scored the most goals in one game, 22 last Saturday against Calvary, and has converted the most foul shots in one contest, seven, to tie with Jewell and Seibert in this category. Jewell has tallied the most points at the foul line for the season, 45.

Yankees Sign Bill Skowron

Slugger's Contract To Exceed $30,000

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI)—Bill Skowron, the New York Yankees' most troublesome player in contract negotiations this spring, signed his 1961 contract Friday for a "substantial raise" which reportedly lifted him slightly over the $30,000 salary figure.

Hamey disclosed only that Skowron received a "substantial raise." He received about $23,000 last year, so Friday's boost would be about $7,000.

The 29-year-old first baseman earned the raise by turning in a top year in 1960 when he was a major factor in the Yankees' pennant triumphs. After being limited to 74 games in 1959 when he was plagued by injury and illness, he appeared in his major-league high of 146 games last year and batted .309. He hit 26 homers and drove in 91 runs, both the best he ever has done for the Yankees. He went on to bat .375 in the World Series with two home runs.

Skowron was the 29th Yankee to sign for '61 and the last "big name" player to agree.

Yorky Favored In Hialeah's Widener 'Cap

Colt Can Sweep Feature Stakes

HIALEAH, Fla. (UPI) — Yorky, Calmuet Farm's come lately handicap star, entered the $100,000 Widener with seven others Friday as a heavy favorite to become the first horse to sweep Hialeah's big-three distance handicaps.

Early figuring made Yorky a 6-5 favorite to capture the mile and one-quarter event but most track observers felt the Colt's odds would drop lower than that by post time Saturday.

Don Poggio, owned by Gustave Ring, carries high weight of 126 pounds compared to 116 on Yorky. But Main Chance Farm's Never Give In goes to the post under the eight weight assignment of 110.

The others in the field of eight were Mrs. Adele Rand's Bourbon Prince, 117 pounds; Julian Abdala's entry of Micarlo, 118, and Banal, 120; I. J. Collins' Derrick 116, and Yorky's Calumet stablemate, On-And-On, 120.

Yorky got into the race with such a light package because the colt never won a stakes race until Hialeah's $25,000 Royal Palm after the Jan. 1 publication of the Widener weights. The young son of Bull Lea then went on to win the $50,000 McLennan Handicap two weeks ago.

Bold Scholar Captures Bowie Feature Race

BOWIE, Md., Feb. 17 (AP) — The Bowie racing strip had returned to a "good" condition when Alex S. Chris' Bold Scholar won the $5,000 Frederick Purse, featured seventh race here today, after being backed down to even-money by the form students.

Apprentice Charles Boland, who is expected to become the leading "bug rider" of the session, gained the winner's circle for the first time when he guided Bold Scholar the six furlongs in 1.12 3/5.

The young rider had to keep to the whip in the last furlong for Bold Scholar was tiring rapidly and Flamingo Farm's Madok, an 8-year-old former stakes campaigner, was closing fast on the rail.

At the end, however, Bold Scholar held a one-length advantage, while Madok was three lengths to the fore of John A. Hoy's Amplitude, lone mare in the veteran field of six sprinters.

Hebert Ties Sullivan In Tucson Open

Playing over the short, 6,434-yard, par-70 El Rio Country Club course, Sullivan and Hebert took a one-stroke lead over a closely bunched field with 36 holes to go.

Hebert, coming in late, had a 66 to go with an opening 65. Sullivan, playing out of Yuba City, Calif., had a 65 to go with an opening round of 66.

Frank Boynton, Orlando, Fla., was in third place with 68-64—132 and Tommy Bolt, Crystal River, Fla., unheralded Bob Wagner, Campbell, Calif., and Marty Furgol, Lamont, Ill., were tied for fourth with 133s.

Terry's 149 Leads Baseball Players Golf Tournament

The handsome right-hander came back strong after bogeying the first four holes. He played one-under-par golf from then on through the 16th hole, bogeying the 17th and 18th.

Paul Richards, Baltimore manager; Gene Mauch, Philadelphia pilot, and Peanuts Lowrey, Phillies coach, tied for second place, each with 150. Richards shot the best round of the day among the active major leaguers, coming in with a 73, three over par. Mauch had a 74 and Lowrey had a 76 following his opening round of 74.

Heavies Matched

Iowa Cagers Test Unbeaten Buckeyes

CHICAGO (UPI)—The Big Ten's unbeaten basketball pace-setter, Ohio State, gets a chance Saturday to polish off its most dangerous challenger, Iowa, in its bid for a second straight conference crown.

The Buckeyes, with a 9-0 conference mark, were heavy favorites too to whip the Hawkeyes, even at Iowa City, although Iowa has a 6-1 mark for second place in the Big Ten.

Ohio State, unbeaten in 24 games, could move within two victories of clinching a Big Ten title tie with a win over the Hawkeyes. Purdue in third place has lost two games and an Ohio State win over Iowa would mean that the Buckeyes by winning half of their remaining four games would clinch a share of the title, regardless of how Purdue or Iowa fare.

Ten Bobsled Teams Vie For World Title

Italy And Germany Are Top Favorites

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (UPI)—Italy's two teams, the German sled and U. S. No. 1 were the top favorites Friday night as 15 teams from 10 nations completed preparations for the world four-man bobsled championships Saturday and Sunday.

Two heats will be run each morning on the one-mile, 16-turn Mt. Vanhoevenberg Olympic bobrun, and the best cumulative time will take the world title.

Italy's Eugenio Monti, who won the two-man championships here last weekend, is driving Italy's No. 1 sled, with Ergio Siorpaes as brakeman again and with Rurio Nordio and Benito Regoni as riders.

But Italy's No. 2, with Sergio Zardini as driver and Romano Bonagura as brake, is highly rated, as is the German sled (Germany has only one entry) with Franz Schelle as driver.

Leads National Loop Scorers With 280

Doug Arrowood pumped in 44 points last Saturday against Calvary EUB to set a new one-game individual scoring mark for the season and boosted his scoring average to 23.3 in the YMCA Sunday School Basketball League.

Arrowood, all-star center for First Methodist's team in the National Division, maintained his big margin in the divisional scoring race this year by upping his total to 280 for 12 games.

Arrowood held a 51-point margin at the halfway mark when his 179 points in eight games bested John Roy's 128. Roy has now slipped to third place in scoring with 196 in 13 contests.

With Roy and Jewell moving up, Salvation Army's Mickey Keller dropped back from third to fourth position. He has tallied 151 points in 12 games.

Arrowood has bombed the nets for 101 points in his last four games, a 25.2 average, and the lanky center has six more to play. At his present scoring pace he could reach 400 points for the season.

The First Methodist cager also has scored the most goals in one game, 22 last Saturday against Calvary, and has converted the most foul shots in one contest, seven, to tie with Jewell and Seibert in this category. Jewell has tallied the most points at the foul line for the season, 45.

Tiger-Armstrong Fight At Garden

NEW YORK (UPI) — Middleweight contender Gene (Ace) Armstrong of Elizabeth, N. J., is favored at 7-5 to beat Nigerian Dick Tiger, British Empire champion, at Madison Square Garden Saturday night and avenge the only two defeats on his record.

Their 10-rounder will be televised nationally by ABC.

Stocky Tiger outpointed lanky Ace in their two previous bouts, but the improved Armstrong is favored this time because of his speed and skill. Also because of his impressive upset decision last November over contender Henry Hank of Detroit.

Yankees Sign Bill Skowron

Slugger's Contract To Exceed $30,000

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI)—Bill Skowron, the New York Yankees' most troublesome player in contract negotiations this spring, signed his 1961 contract Friday for a "substantial raise" which reportedly lifted him slightly over the $30,000 salary figure.

Hamey disclosed only that Skowron received a "substantial raise." He received about $23,000 last year, so Friday's boost would be about $7,000.

The 29-year-old first baseman earned the raise by turning in a top year in 1960 when he was a major factor in the Yankees' pennant triumphs. After being limited to 74 games in 1959 when he was plagued by injury and illness, he appeared in his major-league high of 146 games last year and batted .309. He hit 26 homers and drove in 91 runs, both the best he ever has done for the Yankees. He went on to bat .375 in the World Series with two home runs.

Skowron was the 29th Yankee to sign for '61 and the last "big name" player to agree.

Yorky Favored In Hialeah's Widener 'Cap

Colt Can Sweep Feature Stakes

HIALEAH, Fla. (UPI) — Yorky, Calmuet Farm's come lately handicap star, entered the $100,000 Widener with seven others Friday as a heavy favorite to become the first horse to sweep Hialeah's big-three distance handicaps.

Early figuring made Yorky a 6-5 favorite to capture the mile and one-quarter event but most track observers felt the Colt's odds would drop lower than that by post time Saturday.

Don Poggio, owned by Gustave Ring, carries high weight of 126 pounds compared to 116 on Yorky. But Main Chance Farm's Never Give In goes to the post under the eight weight assignment of 110.

The others in the field of eight were Mrs. Adele Rand's Bourbon Prince, 117 pounds; Julian Abdala's entry of Micarlo, 118, and Banal, 120; I. J. Collins' Derrick 116, and Yorky's Calumet stablemate, On-And-On, 120.

Yorky got into the race with such a light package because the colt never won a stakes race until Hialeah's $25,000 Royal Palm after the Jan. 1 publication of the Widener weights. The young son of Bull Lea then went on to win the $50,000 McLennan Handicap two weeks ago.

Bold Scholar Captures Bowie Feature Race

BOWIE, Md., Feb. 17 (AP) — The Bowie racing strip had returned to a "good" condition when Alex S. Chris' Bold Scholar won the $5,000 Frederick Purse, featured seventh race here today, after being backed down to even-money by the form students.

Apprentice Charles Boland, who is expected to become the leading "bug rider" of the session, gained the winner's circle for the first time when he guided Bold Scholar the six furlongs in 1.12 3/5.

The young rider had to keep to the whip in the last furlong for Bold Scholar was tiring rapidly and Flamingo Farm's Madok, an 8-year-old former stakes campaigner, was closing fast on the rail.

At the end, however, Bold Scholar held a one-length advantage, while Madok was three lengths to the fore of John A. Hoy's Amplitude, lone mare in the veteran field of six sprinters.

Hebert Ties Sullivan In Tucson Open

Playing over the short, 6,434-yard, par-70 El Rio Country Club course, Sullivan and Hebert took a one-stroke lead over a closely bunched field with 36 holes to go.

Hebert, coming in late, had a 66 to go with an opening 65. Sullivan, playing out of Yuba City, Calif., had a 65 to go with an opening round of 66.

Frank Boynton, Orlando, Fla., was in third place with 68-64—132 and Tommy Bolt, Crystal River, Fla., unheralded Bob Wagner, Campbell, Calif., and Marty Furgol, Lamont, Ill., were tied for fourth with 133s.

Terry's 149 Leads Baseball Players Golf Tournament

The handsome right-hander came back strong after bogeying the first four holes. He played one-under-par golf from then on through the 16th hole, bogeying the 17th and 18th.

Paul Richards, Baltimore manager; Gene Mauch, Philadelphia pilot, and Peanuts Lowrey, Phillies coach, tied for second place, each with 150. Richards shot the best round of the day among the active major leaguers, coming in with a 73, three over par. Mauch had a 74 and Lowrey had a 76 following his opening round of 74.

Heavies Matched

Iowa Cagers Tesf Unbeaten Buckeyes

CHICAGO (UPI)—The Big Ten's unbeaten basketball pace-setter, Ohio State, gets a chance Saturday to polish off its most dangerous challenger, Iowa, in its bid for a second straight conference crown.

The Buckeyes, with a 9-0 conference mark, were heavy favorites too to whip the Hawkeyes, even at Iowa City, although Iowa has a 6-1 mark for second place in the Big Ten.

Ohio State, unbeaten in 24 games, could move within two victories of clinching a Big Ten title tie with a win over the Hawkeyes. Purdue in third place has lost two games and an Ohio State win over Iowa would mean that the Buckeyes by winning half of their remaining four games would clinch a share of the title, regardless of how Purdue or Iowa fare.

Ten Bobsled Teams Vie For World Title

Italy And Germany Are Top Favorites

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (UPI)—Italy's two teams, the German sled and U. S. No. 1 were the top favorites Friday night as 15 teams from 10 nations completed preparations for the world four-man bobsled championships Saturday and Sunday.

Two heats will be run each morning on the one-mile, 16-turn Mt. Vanhoevenberg Olympic bob-run, and the best cumulative time will take the world title.

Italy's Eugenio Monti, who won the two-man championships here last weekend, is driving Italy's No. 1 sled, with Ergio Siorpaes as brakeman again and with Rurio Nordio and Benito Regoni as riders.

But Italy's No. 2, with Sergio Zardini as driver and Romano Bonagura as brake, is highly rated, as is the German sled (Germany has only one entry) with Franz Schelle as driver.

Market Fails To Extend Three-Day Rally Friday

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market failed to extend its three-day rally Friday, backing down mildly in the face of heavy overhead resistance and depressing business news. Activity dropped to 4,640,000 shares from 5,070,000 on Thursday.

The signal for the downturn was given in the previous session when the much-watched Dow-Jones industrial average faded as it touched the 656 level — the recovery level reached last June and a stiff roadblock to further upside progress.

Brokers said that all the market needed was a little good business news to effect a penetration but this was not forthcoming. Instead, traders learned that auto production this week is hovering at its lowest level since 1952, industrial production in January declined for the sixth consecutive month, personal income fell to the lowest level since last June and manufacturers' new orders for durable goods sagged 2 per cent in January from the previous month.

Despite all the bad news, the overall performance was better than expected. The Dow-Jones industrial average lost only 0.19 to 651.67 but Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks showed a slightly steeper decline. The rail average rose 0.03 to 144.32 and the utilities firmed 0.19 to 107.56.

The margin of advances over declines narrowed to 562 against 497 while new highs outnumbered new lows by 96 to 2. The total number of issues traded also dipped to 1,275.

Interstate Department Stores, which has a relatively small number of shares outstanding, gained a hefty 6¼. Armour sagged 2½ following news that first quarter earnings would slip below last year's.

On the American Exchange, stocks were irregularly higher with electronics mostly lower. Fairchild Camera dropped 3¼, Giannini lost 1¾, Gulton 2⅛ and Cenco 3¼. Barnes Engineering rose 2¾, Mesabi Iron 2½ and Robinson Technical 2⅛.

Stock sales for the session totaled 1,930,000 shares against 2 million shares Thursday.

Hard On Feet

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) —A young Indonesian chemical engineer who has been walking for nine months through Asian and European countries has arrived in Bratislava, the Czech news agency CTK reported Friday. It quoted him as saying he has worn out five pairs of shoes.

Chicago Grains

CHICAGO (UPI) — Most grain futures tumbled sharply on heavy selling Friday in response to President Kennedy's new farm program.

At the final bell, wheat was off ⅞ to 1½; corn off 1¾ to 2⅞; oats off 1⅛ to 1⅞; rye off 1⅜ to 1¾; soybeans off 2½ to up 1, and drummed lard off 8 to up 2 points.

Corn futures were hardest hit by the selling spree. The President's proposal to sell CCC stocks of corn at market prices if farmers do not cooperate with the proposed program had a bearish influence, as did a lower than expected recommended support price.

After rallying from the opening decline, wheat futures dropped again. Export buying resulted in a partial recovery. Spain reportedly took 5,500,000 bushels of hard wheat.

In corn, closely placed stop loss orders carried prices down more than 2 cents a bushel in the early selloff. Oats were lower with corn, although commission houses bought on the dip. Rye futures were down more than a cent.

Tension prevailed in the soybean trade. Dealings were lighter than usual because of confusion created by the legislative proposals. Nearby contracts enjoyed commission and local support. Meal and oil were mixed. Japan took 325,000 bushels of beans.

Outside markets ranged from steady to lower.

Market Fails To Extend Three-Day Rally Friday

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market failed to extend its three-day rally Friday, backing down mildly in the face of heavy overhead resistance and depressing business news. Activity dropped to 4,640,000 shares from 5,070,000 on Thursday.

The signal for the downturn was given in the previous session when the much-watched Dow-Jones industrial average faded as it touched the 656 level — the recovery level reached last June and a stiff roadblock to further upside progress.

Brokers said that all the market needed was a little good business news to effect a penetration but this was not forthcoming. Instead, traders learned that auto production this week is hovering at its lowest level since 1952, industrial production in January declined for the sixth consecutive month, personal income fell to the lowest level since last June and manufacturers' new orders for durable goods sagged 2 per cent in January from the previous month.

Despite all the bad news, the overall performance was better than expected. The Dow-Jones industrial average lost only 0.19 to 651.67 but Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks showed a slightly steeper decline. The rail average rose 0.03 to 144.32 and the utilities firmed 0.19 to 107.56.

The margin of advances over declines narrowed to 562 against 497 while new highs outnumbered new lows by 96 to 2. The total number of issues traded also dipped to 1,275.

Interstate Department Stores, which has a relatively small number of shares outstanding, gained a hefty 6¼. Armour sagged 2½ following news that first quarter earnings would slip below last year's.

On the American Exchange, stocks were irregularly higher with electronics mostly lower. Fairchild Camera dropped 3¼, Giannini lost 1¾, Gulton 2⅛ and Cenco 3¼. Barnes Engineering rose 2¾, Mesabi Iron 2½ and Robinson Technical 2⅛.

Stock sales for the session totaled 1,930,000 shares against 2 million shares Thursday.

Hard On Feet

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) —A young Indonesian chemical engineer who has been walking for nine months through Asian and European countries has arrived in Bratislava, the Czech news agency CTK reported Friday. It quoted him as saying he has worn out five pairs of shoes.

Chicago Grains

CHICAGO (UPI) — Most grain futures tumbled sharply on heavy selling Friday in response to President Kennedy's new farm program.

At the final bell, wheat was off ⅞ to 1½; corn off 1¾ to 2⅜; oats off 1⅛ to 1⅞; rye off 1⅜ to 1¾; soybeans off 2½ to up 1, and drummed lard off 8 to up 2 points.

Corn futures were hardest hit by the selling spree. The President's proposal to sell CCC stocks of corn at market prices if farmers do not cooperate with the proposed program had a bearish influence, as did a lower than expected recommended support price.

After rallying from the opening decline, wheat futures dropped again. Export buying resulted in a partial recovery. Spain reportedly took 5,500,000 bushels of hard wheat.

In corn, closely placed stop loss orders carried prices down more than 2 cents a bushel in the early selloff. Oats were lower with corn, although commission houses bought on the dip. Rye futures were down more than a cent.

Tension prevailed in the soybean trade. Dealings were lighter than usual because of confusion created by the legislative proposals. Nearby contracts enjoyed commission and local support. Meal and oil were mixed. Japan took 325,000 bushels of beans.

Outside markets ranged from steady to lower.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Since smell forms a large part of what we know as taste, be sure to keep lunch boxes free of stale food odors, by thorough washing and airing after each use.

1928 Plot To Assassinate Dictator Mussolini Told

By ELVEZIO BIANCHI
United Press International

ROME (UPI)—Like the Prince of Conde before the Battle of Rocroy, Tito Zaniboni was sleeping like a baby that morning of Nov. 4, 1928, in room No. 90 of the Hotel Dragoni in the heart of Rome.

Secret police, the dreaded Fascist Ovra, walked into his room exactly four hours before the sleeping Zaniboni was due to shoot Dictator Mussolini from the hotel window.

It was the end of the career of the "naive conspirator," as his fellow Socialists had dubbed the tall, slender, good looking former Alpine officer. But the fact he had been sound asleep when police raided his room saved his life.

The precision rifle he had readied for the assassination attempt was still secreted in a chest of drawers, wrapped and oiled but unloaded. The prosecution in the special Fascist tribunal that tried Zaniboni could never prove he was on the point of shooting Il Duce and could not hand down the death penalty.

Post fascism Italians learned the details of Zaniboni's abortive attempt, the first after the dictator took power in 1924, only recently when death visited the room where Zaniboni was sleeping and took him away for good.

Zaniboni had been conspiring against the Fascist regime with the zeal of an amateur after the murder of Socialist deputy Giacomo Matteotti, kidnaped and killed by a Fascist strong arm squad while en route to the chamber where he was to deliver a bitter attack against the dictator.

One thing Zaniboni did not know was that the Fascist secret police was minutely informed of all his plans to shoot the Duce from a window of the Dragoni Hotel, facing Palazzo Chigi which Mussolini had elected as his office before moving to the more sumptuous and impressive Palazzo Venezia.

The man who kept the Ovra police so scrupulously up to date was Carlo Quaglia, whom Zaniboni considered a most reliable friend and contact man. Zaniboni never thought that his closest collaboratory was on the payroll of the Fascist police.

On Nov. 4, 1928, Mussolini was to address from the balcony of Palazzo Chigi a rally of war veterans. Zaniboni decided that was the day for the attempt. He booked room 90 at the Dragoni Hotel, whose corner window offered a strategic view of the Palazzo Chigi balcony. He sneaked a sharpshooter rifle into the room.

Then he sent his friend Quaglia to see retired Gen. Alberto Capello and borrow some money from him, without informing the general of the plans to assassinate Mussolini. Capello, former commander of the Italian Second Army in World War I, had been held responsible for the defeat of Caporetto and had been eased out of the army by Mussolini.

A nominating committee was appointed by Lambda Chapter, BSP at the meeting conducted by Mrs. Donna Lambert, earlier in the week at the club rooms, North Mechanic Street. It consists of Mrs. Elizabeth Drew, Mrs. Margaret Conlon, Mrs. Diane Young, Mrs. Jeannine Windemuth, and Mrs. Dorothy Green. It will report March 14 and election is to be March 28.

Reports on the City Council card party, April 13, and the meeting, were given. The names of those eligible for the Exemplar Degree were given. A social concluded the meeting.

Jungle King To Make World Appeal On Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—King Savang Vathana will make an extraordinary appeal to the world Sunday, the government announced. Informed sources said he probably will ask foreign nations to halt what his government calls outside interference in this jungle kingdom's civil war, and appeal to all Laotians to unite under his royal banner.

Following the king's appeal, informed sources said Premier Boun Oum's government is expected to request a neutral international commission to visit Laos to observe the situation.

Boun previously charged Communist North Viet Nam intervened with troop and supply support for leftist rebels. Westerners generally disbelieve North Vietnamese soldiers are involved on a large scale.

There has been a flurry of government and diplomatic activity in Vientiane this week.

The king presided over a formal meeting Thursday of the Council of Ministers — the first time he has done this since last Aug. 9.

The king also met with foreign ambassadors and the United Nation's special envoy, Sakari Tuomioja. U.S. Ambassador Winthrop Brown, who recently returned from consultations in Washington, was among ambassadors granted audiences.

Brooklyn School To Honor Little Yolande Gabrielle

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mrs. Daisy Gabrielle and her daughter Yolande, 6, will be honored next week by a Brooklyn High School because of their efforts to comply with a federal court order that ended racial segregation of a New Orleans school.

Day after day last fall, Yolande was sent through a mob of cursing white women demonstrators to classes at McDonogh 19 Elementary School. The Gabrielle family finally moved from New Orleans to Providence, R. I., after segregationists pressured his employers to dismiss James Gabrielle.

Mrs. Gabrielle will come to New York Feb. 21 to accept the Prospect Park High School's first annual "woman of the year" award and Yolande will be given $250 to be used for her education, the board of education announced Friday.

Starves In Bed

NEWCASTLE, England (UPI)—Officials reported Friday that Mrs. Laura Brooks, 75, died of starvation when her folding bed closed around her and trapped her for three days. A coroner's court returned a verdict of accidental death.

Potomac Basin Needs Are Cited

WASHINGTON (AP)—Col. John Allen, Army district engineer, predicts that the demand for Potomac River Basin water will increase about five-fold in the next 50 years.

He said the increase in consumption will be caused by a population boom and a rise in per capita water use.

Col. Allen spoke at a meeting Thursday of the water supply and pollution abatement committee of the Washington Metropolitan Regional Conference.

Group Meets

Card captains are taking reservations for the Couples Card party of the Newcomers Club, it was announced at the meeting Thursday evening at Hafer House. The party will be Monday. Mrs. Robert Wilkins conducted the meeting and named a nominating committee composed of Mrs. Ernest Fawcett, Mrs. Arthur Maness, Mrs. Judson Collins, Mrs. Paul O'Hara, Mrs. James Carl and Mrs. Willard Green. They are to report in March.

John Hafer, Sr., addressed the group outlining the origin of furniture and funeral homes. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Wayne Dalton, Mrs. Morton Newstadt, Mrs. John Bushby, Mrs. Wilkins, Mrs. Thomas Rentz, Mrs. Morris Howstaf and Mrs. Jack Fink. Concluding a tour of the furniture and gift section, refreshments were served in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. John Hafer, Jr.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Since smell forms a large part of what we know as taste, be sure to keep lunch boxes free of stale food odors, by thorough washing and airing after each use.

1928 Plot To Assassinate Dictator Mussolini Told

By ELVEZIO BIANCHI
United Press International

ROME (UPI)—Like the Prince of Conde before the Battle of Rocroy, Tito Zaniboni was sleeping like a baby that morning of Nov. 4, 1928, in room No. 90 of the Hotel Dragoni in the heart of Rome.

Secret police, the dreaded Fascist Ovra, walked into his room exactly four hours before the sleeping Zaniboni was due to shoot Dictator Mussolini from the hotel window.

It was the end of the career of the "naive conspirator," as his fellow Socialists had dubbed the tall, slender, good looking former Alpine officer. But the fact he had been sound asleep when police raided his room saved his life.

The precision rifle he had readied for the assassination attempt was still secreted in a chest of drawers, wrapped and oiled but unloaded. The prosecution in the special Fascist tribunal that tried Zaniboni could never prove he was on the point of shooting Il Duce and could not hand down the death penalty.

Post fascism Italians learned the details of Zaniboni's abortive attempt, the first after the dictator took power in 1924, only recently when death visited the room where Zaniboni was sleeping and took him away for good.

Zaniboni had been conspiring against the Fascist regime with the zeal of an amateur after the murder of Socialist deputy Giacomo Matteotti, kidnaped and killed by a Fascist strong arm squad while en route to the chamber where he was to deliver a bitter attack against the dictator.

One thing Zaniboni did not know was that the Fascist secret police was minutely informed of all his plans to shoot the Duce from a window of the Dragoni Hotel, facing Palazzo Chigi which Mussolini had elected as his office before moving to the more sumptuous and impressive Palazzo Venezia.

The man who kept the Ovra police so scrupulously up to date was Carlo Quaglia, whom Zaniboni considered a most reliable friend and contact man. Zaniboni never thought that his closest collaboratory was on the payroll of the Fascist police.

On Nov. 4, 1928, Mussolini was to address from the balcony of Palazzo Chigi a rally of war veterans. Zaniboni decided that was the day for the attempt. He booked room 90 at the Dragoni Hotel, whose corner window offered a strategic view of the Palazzo Chigi balcony. He sneaked a sharpshooter rifle into the room.

Then he sent his friend Quaglia to see retired Gen. Alberto Capello and borrow some money from him, without informing the general of the plans to assassinate Mussolini. Capello, former commander of the Italian Second Army in World War I, had been held responsible for the defeat of Caporetto and had been eased out of the army by Mussolini.

Quaglia informed the secret police. Four hours before the war veteran's rally, raiding Ovra men found Zaniboni peacefully asleep. It was a premature for it prevented the tough judges of the special Fascist tribunal from sentencing Zaniboni to death.

The tribunal handed Zaniboni a 30-year sentence.

Jungle King To Make World Appeal On Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—King Savang Vathana will make an extraordinary appeal to the world Sunday, the government announced. Informed sources said he probably will ask foreign nations to halt what his government calls outside interference in this jungle kingdom's civil war, and appeal to all Laotians to unite under his royal banner.

Following the king's appeal, informed sources said Premier Boun Oum's government is expected to request a neutral international commission to visit Laos to observe the situation.

Boun previously charged Communist North Viet Nam intervened with troop and supply support for leftist rebels. Westerners generally disbelieve North Vietnamese soldiers are involved on a large scale.

There has been a flurry of government and diplomatic activity in Vientiane this week.

The king presided over a formal meeting Thursday of the Council of Ministers — the first time he has done this since last Aug. 9.

The king also met with foreign ambassadors and the United Nation's special envoy, Sakari Tuomioja. U.S. Ambassador Winthrop Brown, who recently returned from consultations in Washington, was among ambassadors granted audiences.

Brooklyn School To Honor Little Yolande Gabrielle

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mrs. Daisy Gabrielle and her daughter Yolande, 6, will be honored next week by a Brooklyn High School because of their efforts to comply with a federal court order that ended racial segregation of a New Orleans school.

Day after day last fall, Yolande was sent through a mob of cursing white women demonstrators to classes at McDonogh 19 Elementary School. The Gabrielle family finally moved from New Orleans to Providence, R. I., after segregationists pressured his employers to dismiss James Gabrielle.

Mrs. Gabrielle will come to New York Feb. 21 to accept the Prospect Park High School's first annual "woman of the year" award and Yolande will be given $250 to be used for her education, the board of education announced Friday.

Starves In Bed

NEWCASTLE, England (UPI)—Officials reported Friday that Mrs. Laura Brooks, 75, died of starvation when her folding bed closed around her and trapped her for three days. A coroner's court returned a verdict of accidental death.

Potomac Basin Needs Are Cited

WASHINGTON (AP)—Col. John Allen, Army district engineer, predicts that the demand for Potomac River Basin water will increase about five-fold in the next 50 years.

He said the increase in consumption will be caused by a population boom and a rise in per capita water use.

Col. Allen spoke at a meeting Thursday of the water supply and pollution abatement committee of the Washington Metropolitan Regional Conference.

Oakland Couple Killed In Crash

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Weber Die; Five West Virginians Are Injured

An Oakland couple was killed and five other persons were hospitalized yesterday evening in a two-car accident near the couple's home on U.S. Route 219 about two and a half miles south of the Garrett county seat.

Dead are Ralph E. Weber, 73, operator of a greenhouse and veteran weather observer in Maryland, and his wife, Mrs. Mary A. (Bond) Weber.

Mr. Weber was reported to have been killed instantly and was pronounced dead on arrival at Garrett County Memorial Hospital in Oakland. His wife died in the hospital, police said.

Five Admitted

Otis Cottrell, Hometown, Putnam County, W.Va., driver of the other car who sustained a fractured left leg, injured chest, possible internal injuries and lacerations of the body and head.

McDonald Wolfe, 50, of Poca, Putnam County, W.Va., suffered severe lacerations of the face and head.

Lee Ingram, 63, also of Poca, had both legs fractured and suffered possible internal injuries and lacerations of the head and face.

Tfc. D. A. Tucker of the State Police said the accident occurred about 6 p.m. yesterday.

Drives Onto Highway

Mr. Weber was coming onto Route 219 from the private driveway and pulled into the path of the car being driven south on Route 219 by Mr. Cottrell.

The car driven by Mr. Cottrell hit the left side of Mr. Weber's car and continued across the highway and off the east side of the road where it came to a stop. Charges are pending, said Tfc. Tucker.

Five of the seven were taken to the hospital in ambulances of the Leighton Funeral Home in Oakland and the other two in a station wagon which was passing by.

Mr. Weber, a life-long resident of Garrett County, made daily weather observations for the U.S. Weather Bureau for over a half-century.

About two years ago he and 20 other citizen observers were honored by the weather bureau for

Del. Buckel Says PTA Plan Would Up Taxes

Garrett County Delegate Elbert E. Buckel this week told Parent-Teacher Associations of that county that support of their recommendations would mean a substantial tax increase and place a greater burden on already overburdened taxpayers.

In a February 16 letter to the association he said:

"In reply to your recent request I would like to give you some figures which I hope you will bring before your membership.

"The average teacher and principal pay in Garrett County for the year ending June 1960 was $5,028. This exceeds the average pay in 13 other counties of Maryland.

"The average cost per pupil was $308.69 and exceeds that of 10 other counties.

"These figures do not include $14,508,763 appropriated for the teachers retirement system in 1960 and a $4,589,498 item for social security. This represents an additional cost to the state of over $800 per teacher.

"The above figures do not show the increase in salaries voted by the Legislature last year which I believe will raise the average salary in Garrett County about $200 per year.

"Compare these figures with those of the average employe of Garrett County covered by unemployment compensation which is $2,802. The average income for farmers for the county are not available but farm income for the State of Maryland has declined from $46.6 million in 1949 to $28.5. in 1959 while real estate taxes have risen from 10.1 per cent to 24.2 per cent of net income during the same period.

"To support your recommendations would mean a substantial tax increase, placing a greater burden on the already overburdened taxpayer."

Deaths

Davis, John H., 81, of near Oldtown.

Jackson, Mrs. Howard, 70, Jane Frazier Village.

Quinn, Mrs. R. J., 80, native of Frostburg.

Labor Union Tax Exemption Bill Enacted

SRC Maintenance Crew Bill Passes

Property owned by labor unions and used solely for the use of members will be exempted from Allegany County taxes under a bill adopted by the Senate yesterday.

It is House Bill 217, sponsored by the Allegany County Delegation.

It provides exemption from Allegany County taxes of property owned by any bona-fide union or unions which is used solely for the benefit of members. Any part of the property used for commercial purposes would be taxed.

The legislative intent of the bill, a delegation spokesman said, is to give labor unions the same tax advantages as are enjoyed by fraternal organizations.

Legislators estimated the amount of property to be taken off the tax books will be "negligible."

Another county legislator explained that under Home Rule legislation, the Senator and Delegation has no power to make tax exemptions in Cumberland or any municipality.

Another Delegation measure, House Bill 153, passed the House of Delegates yesterday.

It is designed to place State Roads Commission highway maintenance workers in the classified state employes system.

Deer Situation Is Aired By Game Warden

Antlerless Season In Some States

Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, said last night he is definitely opposed to possible legislation which would create an antlerless deer season in Maryland.

Such a season, he pointed out, has been in effect in other states which have a larger deer population.

In a prepared statement Mr. Minke said:

"Much has been written about those various states that have enacted antlerless deer seasons, this of course is an effort to convince the Maryland deer hunters we likewise should have an antlerless deer season.

"It is only natural that many of the big deer states found it necessary to reduce the deer population to insure proper carrying capacity.

"But before taking such action all these states conducted lengthy deer studies; no state can be certain it can solve its problems by following the same course of action.

"Every state has various conditions that must be studied carefully, many of these states spent several years making studies.

"For the past year and a half the Maryland Game and Inland Fish Commission has made an extensive check on the amount of deer damage done to farm crops and orchards but no concerted effort has yet been made to provide Maryland with a good deer management project.

"Therefore the sportsmen and farmers alike could hardly be expected to support any deer project if it is based entirely on research work conducted in states that have a large excess deer population, which Maryland doesn't have.

Col. Millholland Assigned To Help Plan World War II Invasion Of Europe

Editor's Note — This is the third of a series of stories covering the military career of Col. Randolph Millholland and activities of the 29th Division.

By F. ALLAN WEATHERHOLT
News Staff Writer

But Col. Randolph Millholland, whose lifetime has been dedicated to soldiering, this was only a beginniing.

After his Rangers had been disbanded and men reassigned to their outfits in division, Millholland was assigned to First Army Headquarters and attached to the British Air Force.

It was not his knowledge of the Air Force that brought him this assignment, although he is an accomplished glider pilot, but it was partly, he believes, his natural success in dealing with the British at Commando depots and elsewhere, plus his knowledge of ground-fighting.

He was assigned to the Royal Air Force to study British methods of air-ground operations. He and a corps of 16 other men prepared and had published a manual for United States troops in Europe. Then he went to the American Air Force as an air-ground liaison officer working with ground support aircraft.

Enormous Responsibility

He soon discovered all this had been designed to prepare him for the enormous task of being in direct control of fighter groups on D-Day. The record shows that his knowledge of this phase of operation brought great results and coordinated the activities of the air and ground forces, holding down losses and casualities, and contributing to the success of the invasion.

During the hectic days immediately after the assault on Omaha Beach, the 29th Division suffered severe losses, but determinedly gained ground.

Col. Millholland recalls that Mapor Tom Howie, the man who trained the First Battalion of Rangers while Millholland trained the Second Battalion, died a hero's death. Commanding the Third Battalion of the 115th Infantry, Major Howie's troops had bulldogged their way off the beach and into the village of La Madelaine. They had used bayonets and hand grenades to cut through the German lines. At the village the battalion encountered Col. Sidney V. Bingham's Second Battalion, which had been battering the Germans at a crucial point when the enemy had surrounded the 29th.

Major Howie, known in World War II history as "the Major of St. Lo," told his men, "I'll see you in St. Lo," and the battalion pressed onward. A few minutes later, Major Howie was killed.

Delegates Fail To Censure News Coverage

Subject Discussed At Secret Meeting

By LOUIS G. PANOS

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—In a rare post-adjournment secret meeting, the House of Delegates debated Friday whether to formally censure news coverage of the current Maryland Legislature.

Most of the sometimes heated discussion, members later said, involved a Baltimore Sun editorial printed Thursday under the heading "Centennial Frivolity."

It needled the legislature for visiting Frederick on Wednesday as part of a Civil War Centennial observance.

But after kicking the subject around for 50 minutes, the delegates decided against a resolution of censure or any similar step, newsmen were told.

Any member who felt strongly enough to introduce such a resolution could do so, the censensus seemed to be, but there was little indication he would receive much support.

Reflects Tension

The session, in which the House met as a Committee of the Whole after adjourning its business meetings for the weekend, reflected much of the tension surrounding this 90-day legislature.

Members have grown increasingly sensitive to news reports and editorial criticism—especially the latter—on such topics as the Frederick trip, a proposal to double their $1,800 annual salaries and a bill to restrict a savings-and-loan insurance firm headed by three Baltimore County delegates.

Although many members freely talked to reporters about Friday's discussion of a possible censure move, the meeting itself was held in air-tight secrecy.

One delegate who momentarily left the chamber was steadfastly refused re-admission by a doorman. The frustrated member finally found a more sympathetic sentinel at another entrance and got back into the House shortly before the session broke up.

Gets Loan Bill

In another move involving the press, Sen. Alvin Jones, D-Balto 4th, introduced a bill to prohibit Baltimore City newspapers, radio and television stations from referring to a person's color in any crime report.

In its business session, the House passed and sent to the Senate a measure to authorize the Prince Georges County Commission to regulate home-improvement companies.

Introduced in the House was another bill to regulate savings and loan associations. Unlike a regulatory bill endorsed by Gov. Tawes, this would allow continued operation of firms which issue more than one kind of stock.

Sets Up Board

The new savings-loan bill also would set up a regulatory board for the industry, as would the Tawes-backed bill, but its power would not be so great. The measure was sponsored by Dels. Murray Abramson and Sol J. Friedman, both D-Balto 4th, and Robert P. Cannon, D-Wicomico.

New Senate legislation included a bill to set up the first lower criminal and traffic court in any county. It was proposed by Sen. Louis N. Phipps, D-Anne Arundel.

He would set up a three-member People's Court to take over from the trial magistrates now appointed by the governor.

Former Local Woman Dies Of Gun Wounds

Mrs. Catherine Lee (Zembower) Hunt, 37-year-old former resident of Cumberland, died yesterday in Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, of gunshot wounds inflicted by her estranged husband Thursday night.

The husband, Henry J. Hunt 4th, 52, then turned the weapon on himself and died almost instantly of a head wound.

The shooting took place in the 500-block of Beall Avenue, Rockville, and Montgomery County authorities said they were unable to learn the motive for what they termed the murder and suicide.

A daughter of Mrs. Alma Geiger, Corriganville, Mrs. Hunt graduated in 1940 from Allegany High School and also was a graduate of Memorial Hospital School of Nursing. She served with the Veterans Administration as a nurse during and following World War II.

According to Montgomery County authorities, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt were estranged and maintained separate living quarters. She lived on Calvert Road, Rockville, while he resided on Horners Lane where he operated a dog kennel.

Police said Hunt apparently waited for his wife to leave a home on Beall Avenue where Mrs. Hunt had gone to take care of a heart patient. He shot her several times with a .38 calibre pistol and after she fell to the ground turned the weapon on himself.

Baltimore Man Hurt In Crash

A 26-year-old Baltimore man was admitted to Memorial Hospital yesterday afternoon after being injured in an auto accident five miles from Romney, W.Va.

Admitted to the hospital was Leroy J. Fischer, of 408 Grove Thorn Road, Baltimore. He sustained lacerations of the face, possible fractured jaw and possible back injury. The hospital listed his condition as "satisfactory."

State Police at Romney investigated the accident but details of the crash were not available last night.

Delegates Fail To Censure News Coverage

Subject Discussed At Secret Meeting

By LOUIS G. PANOS

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—In a rare post-adjournment secret meeting, the House of Delegates debated Friday whether to formally censure news coverage of the current Maryland Legislature.

Most of the sometimes heated discussion, members later said, involved a Baltimore Sun editorial printed Thursday under the heading "Centennial Frivolity."

It needled the legislature for visiting Frederick on Wednesday as part of a Civil War Centennial observance.

But after kicking the subject around for 50 minutes, the delegates decided against a resolution of censure or any similar step, newsmen were told.

Any member who felt strongly enough to introduce such a resolution could do so, the censensus seemed to be, but there was little indication he would receive much support.

Reflects Tension

The session, in which the House met as a Committee of the Whole after adjourning its business meetings for the weekend, reflected much of the tension surrounding this 90-day legislature.

Members have grown increasingly sensitive to news reports and editorial criticism—especially the latter—on such topics as the Frederick trip, a proposal to double their $1,800 annual salaries and a bill to restrict a savings-and-loan insurance firm headed by three Baltimore County delegates.

Although many members freely talked to reporters about Friday's discussion of a possible censure move, the meeting itself was held in air-tight secrecy.

One delegate who momentarily left the chamber was steadfastly refused re-admission by a doorman. The frustrated member finally found a more sympathetic sentinel at another entrance and got back into the House shortly before the session broke up.

Gets Loan Bill

In another move involving the press, Sen. Alvin Jones, D-Balto 4th, introduced a bill to prohibit Baltimore City newspapers, radio and television stations from referring to a person's color in any crime report.

In its business session, the House passed and sent to the Senate a measure to authorize the Prince Georges County Commission to regulate home-improvement companies.

Introduced in the House was another bill to regulate savings and loan associations. Unlike a regulatory bill endorsed by Gov. Tawes, this would allow continued operation of firms which issue more than one kind of stock.

Sets Up Board

The new savings-loan bill also would set up a regulatory board for the industry, as would the Tawes-backed bill, but its power would not be so great. The measure was sponsored by Dels. Murray Abramson and Sol J. Friedman, both D-Balto 4th, and Robert P. Cannon, D-Wicomico.

New Senate legislation included a bill to set up the first lower criminal and traffic court in any county. It was proposed by Sen. Louis N. Phipps, D-Anne Arundel.

He would set up a three-member People's Court to take over from the trial magistrates now appointed by the governor.

Former Local Woman Dies Of Gun Wounds

Mrs. Catherine Lee (Zembower) Hunt, 37-year-old former resident of Cumberland, died yesterday in Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, of gunshot wounds inflicted by her estranged husband Thursday night.

The husband, Henry J. Hunt 4th, 52, then turned the weapon on himself and died almost instantly of a head wound.

The shooting took place in the 500-block of Beall Avenue, Rockville, and Montgomery County authorities said they were unable to learn the motive for what they termed the murder and suicide.

A daughter of Mrs. Alma Geiger, Corriganville, Mrs. Hunt graduated in 1940 from Allegany High School and also was a graduate of Memorial Hospital School of Nursing. She served with the Veterans Administration as a nurse during and following World War II.

According to Montgomery County authorities, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt were estranged and maintained separate living quarters. She lived on Calvert Road, Rockville, while he resided on Horners Lane where he operated a dog kennel.

Police said Hunt apparently waited for his wife to leave a home on Beall Avenue where Mrs. Hunt had gone to take care of a heart patient. He shot her several times with a .38 calibre pistol and after she fell to the ground turned the weapon on himself.

Col. Millholland Assigned To Help Plan World War II Invasion Of Europe

Editor's Note — This is the third of a series of stories covering the military career of Col. Randolph Millholland and activities of the 29th Division.

By F. ALLAN WEATHERHOLT
News Staff Writer

From National Guard private to commander of his company, to commander of his battalion, only to be selected to train and organize one of the first American Ranger battalions, seems like enough military career for one man.

But Col. Randolph Millholland, whose lifetime has been dedicated to soldiering, this was only a beginniing.

After his Rangers had been disbanded and men reassigned to their outfits in division, Millholland was assigned to First Army Headquarters and attached to the British Air Force.

It was not his knowledge of the Air Force that brought him this assignment, although he is an accomplished glider pilot, but it was partly, he believes, his natural success in dealing with the British at Commando depots and elsewhere, plus his knowledge of ground-fighting.

He was assigned to the Royal Air Force to study British methods of air-ground operations. He and a corps of 16 other men prepared and had published a manual for United States troops in Europe. Then he went to the American Air Force as an air-ground liaison officer working with ground support aircraft.

Enormous Responsibility

He soon discovered all this had been designed to prepare him for the enormous task of being in direct control of fighter groups on D-Day. The record shows that his knowledge of this phase of operation brought great results and coordinated the activities of the air and ground forces, holding down losses and casualities, and contributing to the success of the invasion.

During the hectic days immediately after the assault on Omaha Beach, the 29th Division suffered severe losses, but determinedly gained ground.

Col. Millholland recalls that Mapor Tom Howie, the man who trained the First Battalion of Rangers while Millholland trained the Second Battalion, died a hero's death. Commanding the Third Battalion of the 115th Infantry, Major Howie's troops had bulldogged their way off the beach and into the village of La Madelaine. They had used bayonets and hand grenades to cut through the German lines. At the village the battalion encountered Col. Sidney V. Bingham's Second Battalion, which had been battering the Germans at a crucial point when the enemy had surrounded the 29th.

Major Howie, known in World War II history as "the Major of St. Lo," told his men, "I'll see you in St. Lo," and the battalion pressed onward. A few minutes later, Major Howie was killed.

Del. Buckel Says PTA Plan Would Up Taxes

Garrett County Delegate Elbert E. Buckel this week told Parent-Teacher Associations of that county that support of their recommendations would mean a substantial tax increase and place a greater burden on already overburdened taxpayers.

In a February 16 letter to the association he said:

"In reply to your recent request I would like to give you some figures which I hope you will bring before your membership.

"The average teacher and principal pay in Garrett County for the year ending June 1960 was $5,028. This exceeds the average pay in 13 other counties of Maryland.

"The average cost per pupil was $308.69 and exceeds that of 10 other counties.

"These figures do not include $14,508,763 appropriated for the teachers retirement system in 1960 and a $4,589,498 item for social security. This represents an additional cost to the state of over $800 per teacher.

"The above figures do not show the increase in salaries voted by the Legislature last year which I believe will raise the average salary in Garrett County about $200 per year.

"Compare these figures with those of the average employe of Garrett County covered by unemployment compensation which is $2,802. The average income for farmers for the county are not available but farm income for the State of Maryland has declined from $46.6 million in 1949 to $28.5. in 1959 while real estate taxes have risen from 10.1 per cent to 24.2 per cent of net income during the same period.

"To support your recommendations would mean a substantial tax increase, placing a greater burden on the already overburdened taxpayer."

Child Star Problems Viewed

By CHARLES J. LEAVY

While talking with Jackie Cooper, star and co-producer of the "Hennesey" series, the impression kept coming back again and again that we were interviewing not the grown-up successful stage, screen and television star, but the little Jackie who we enjoyed so much back in the 30's.

Jackie Cooper in 30s

"Most people probably are not aware that I started making silent pictures when I was three years in 1925. Actually, they were only small parts in the Lloyd Hamilton comedies. It was after that that I became a member of Hal Roach's 'Our Gang' comedy troupe," Jackie reminded us.

"I was mentioned for an individual Oscar but I lost it to Lionel Barrymore. However, it made little impression on me at the time," Jackie smiled, "for I fell fast asleep in Marie Dressler's arms during the lengthy ceremony."

It has often been said that all men are just "big little boys." If grown-up Jackie were the criterion for this statement, the premise would most certainly be proved. That cherubic face of "Our Gang Comedies" though older and thinner now is still possessed of that disarming smile which endeared him to so many.

No one should be better qualified to give advice on the advisability of parents urging their children to strive for an acting career.

Jackie Cooper offers this advice to all parents with thoughts of pushing their child into an acting career: "Don't do it. Don't force your child to become an actor."

Cooper is firmly convinced that a child's place is at home, at school, or in the playground . . . any place but in front of the movie or television cameras.

"Parents of a child actor must be prepared to devote 100 per cent of their time to the child. They must guarantee that he will develop and maintain a normal set of values. They must grow as the child grows. They must provide the education that will enable their child to keep pace in an adult world.

"It's a tremendous load for parents. Few fathers or mothers are willing to devote themselves entirely to managing the career of their child, as my mother did.

"Child actors certainly can grow up to be nice normal people, but they must be prepared to face the day when they are no longer needed or wanted, the day their voice is unsuitable, their looks changed, their face no different from hundreds of other young faces. That day arrives for all child actors.

"First," he says, "acting must be recognized for what it is — a complicated, involved business. Agents, managers, publicists and lawyers must be hired. Special skills must be learned to meet the demands of the craft.

"Most important of all is the need to gain experience. As I climbed the theatrical ladder from the Lloyd Hamilton comedies to 'Skippy' and beyond, I was exposed to every type of acting. Today that's impossible. I would think that the life of a child actor is even more difficult today than it was when I was young.

"Where does all this leave the youngster who imitates everything he sees on television, the youngster other people say should go into show business? Quite simple. It leaves him in the home, at school or in the playground — where he belongs."

Some weeks ago, somebody reported to her that a certain actor saw her performance and said, "She got the part because she's Fonda's daughter. She should be clubbed off the stage."

"It made me feel awful," Jane says. "I know, intellectually, that I got this part on merit—I read for it just like everyone else. But still they resent me. I know some other actors resent me because of my father.
